AUTO KILLS NINE AT SYRACUSE STATE FAIR

Fourteen Others Injured as Lee Oldfield's Machine Plunges Into Race Spectators.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Nine persons were killed and fourteen were seriously hurt when a Knox racing car, driven by Lee Oldfield, leaped from the track and plunged into the throng of spectators during the fifty-mile contest at the State Fair Grounds late this afternoon.

The accident occurred at the first turn of the track. On the inside of the oval the people were jammed against the fence. The racers had just completed the forty-third mile of the race and De Palma was leading. Oldfield was coming close behind. On the first turn his right tire blew up. His machine leaped from the track, crashed through the fence and plunged into the mass of people on the other side.

Call Doctors and Ambulances.

In the grandstand it was at first thought that no one had been hurt. An announcement to this effect was made. But in a moment or two the shouts of the crowd that gathered about the scene of the tragedy led the officials that the accident was a tragedy.

Calls were sent to Syracuse, and every ambulance in the city was hurried to the scene. Doctors were summoned and a score of them and several nurses gathered to attend the injured. Vehicles in the grounds were pressed into service as ambulances. The injured were taken to the emergency hospital within the grounds and the woman's building was turned into a hospital.

President Taft had left the track less than an hour before, after witnessing the first events. The fifty-mile race started. After the twenty-fifth mile, spectators noticed that the shoe of a tire had burst and was flopping on Oldfield's big Knox car.

Had Trouble With Tires.

De Palma was also having tire trouble and it was thought that Lee Oldfield kept in the race in the belief that De Palma would be compelled to stop, but De Palma did not stop. Up to the forty-third mile it was noticed that Oldfield had been shutting off his power as he passed the grandstand, and taking the first turn carefully, but on the lap before the accident occurred he opened his engine up in passing. In this way he crept up on De Palma.

The track was not in good condition. President Taft had gone over the track in an automobile just before the fifty mile event was called. It had been sprinkled for his trip. Afterward De Palma and Bruman had at first refused to enter in the race because of the wet track.

The race had reached the point where the spectators, thrilled by the performance of the racers, crowded against the fence. De Palma and Oldfield swept into the dale to visit her aunt, Mrs. C. P. Leach, who occupies the Whittier birthplace. Miss James was last seen boarding a car in Cliffordale, on September 9. Yo-day City Marshal Mark sent out a descriptive circular to the police of all towns in the State. The missing woman is 5 ft. 5, weighs 180, and has a light complexion.

Spelling Book Needed at the Public Library

105 Applicants Examined in English, and Some of Them Expect to "Loose."

If there be any one institution on earth where they would be supposed to spell correctly, what is the building?

Answer—The Boston Public Library, of course.

There was an examination at the library yesterday of 105 applicants for positions in the library service. Sixteen questions were submitted on a printed slip for applicants to answer.

Question No. 2 was:

An agent bought 420 books at $3.75 each and sold them for $4.90 each, but failed to collect for 10 books. His expenses were $190. How much did he gain or lose?

Question No. 7 was:

Improve the following sentence by the use of synonyms: After he had constructed the house the contractor began to construct the stable. The construction of the buildings took a long time, or they were thoroughly constructed.

Maybe some reader, after studying the spelling in these questions, will send the Boston Public Library a spelling book.

WOULD OPEN COAL FIELDS.

Pinchot Also Finds Agricultural Possibilities in Alaska.

SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 16.—Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, has sailed for Cordova, whence he will go to the fleeing River coal fields. Speaking here Mr. Pinchot said he believed the coal fields should be opened and that he believed Congress would act at the approaching session. His views of Alaska had been greatly modified, he said, and he was amazed at the agricultural possibilities of the Matanuska Valley.

MRS. FARRAR ILL IN PARIS.

Prima Donna with Mother, Who Is Attacked by Appendicitis.

Sidney Farrar, father of Geraldine Farrar, has sailed from New York for Paris, where his wife is seriously ill. Miss Farrar and her mother were to have returned to this country this week, but Mrs. Farrar became ill from appendicitis and an operation was necessary. Mr Farrar received a cablegram Thursday calling him to Paris.

WOMAN OF 84 ARTIST.

Mrs. Porter of Brockton Takes Prizes at the Fair.

BROCKTON, Sept. 16.—Friends of Mrs. Mary D. Porter, eighty-four years old, congratulated her to-day on her success at the Weymouth fair, where she won first prizes for original oil and water color paintings and for choice specimens of poultry. Mrs. Porter works every day at her easel or among her chickens in the hennery and is in the best of health.

Cliftondale Girl Missing.

HAVERHILL, Sept. 17.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Vilonia James, thirty-eight, who left her home in Cliftondale to visit her aunt, Mrs. C. P. Leach, who occupies the Whittier birthplace. Miss James was last seen boarding a car in Cliftondale, on September 9. Yo-day City Marshal Mark sent out a descriptive circular to the police of all towns in the State. The missing woman is 5 ft. 5, weighs 180, and has a light complexion.

PROHIBITION ARMY MAY INVADE CAPITOL

Maine's W. C. T. U. Head Plans March of 20,000 If "Drys" Are Counted Out.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Lillian N. Stevens, president of the National W. C. T. U., says if the "Drys" are counted out she will march to the State House at the head of an army of 20,000 men and women and challenge Governor Plaisted to debate the issue.

Both "Wets" and "Drys" still claim the victory in the election of Monday on the question of repealing the constitutional prohibition amendment. Secretary of State Davis has announced that the vote was:

Against repeal 60,376

This gives the "Wets" the victory by a scant majority of 138 in a State-wide election, and the "Drys" are not satisfied and want to look at the ballots. Many town clerks have refused to let anybody do this, and there was joy in the Prohibition camp when Attorney-General William R. Pattangall decided that every Maine citizen has the right to inspect them.

It is understood that the Attorney-General will take official action against the city clerk of Calais and the clerks of the towns who have withheld the ballots from inspection if they disobey to-day's mandate.

Many Complications Possible.

It is possible that it may not be decided which side won the great battle at the polls until the Legislature takes up the matter, and it is understood that Governor Plaisted will call a special session. One of the resolves passed last year was that the repeal question should be submitted to the votes of Maine citizens, and under this same act it is provided:

"Lists of votes so received shall be made and returned to the Secretary of State in the same manner as votes for Governor and members of the Legislature, and the Governor and Council shall count the same and make return to the Legislature, and if a majority of the votes are in favor of said amendment the Constitution shall be amended accordingly."

Governor Plaisted is the sole judge of what constitutes the necessity of a special session of the law-making body, and it is contended that his belief in the necessity of a recount may justifiably be based on use in this chapter of the words 'if a majority of the votes are in favor.' According to the Secretary of State's figures, that repeal majority exists.

When the council holds a meeting with Governor Plaisted on Monday the official returns will be opened and canvassed.

The "Drys" say that the town clerks of Limestone, Topsfield, Matinicus Isle, Salem, Brownsville, St. Francis Plantation and Beechwood made blunders in returns aggregating 490 votes by writing "Yes" totals in the spaces reserved for "No" and vice versa. The Secretary of State has to take returns as he gets them, and cannot make corrections. It is up to the Governor and council to remedy errors.

CHANGE AMERICA CUP RULES, SAYS LAWSON

Trophy Seized by "Society Sportsmen," for Own Uplifting," Says Financier.

Thomas W. Lawson agreed with Sir Thomas Lipton, in an interview yesterday, that the rules governing the American cup races should be changed. In one of his characteristic straight-from-the-shoulder talks Mr. Lawson declares that the American cup had been seized by a band of "cheap Johns" and "society sportsmen" for their own uplifting.

"God speed any man," says Mr. Lawson, "native or foreign, who can redeem America's cup and place it back upon the pedestal where Stevens so carefully and courageously placed it."

"I suppose," said Mr. Lawson, "my opinion of the latest move in international yachting is the same as that of all yachtsmen, foreign and American, other than those who have used the America's cup as a business or social ladder, namely, those which would lift the great trophy from its present resting place in the muck pile of international sport as it was so recently and so deeply mired by a small band of the New York yachtsmen-sports-men should welcome it.

Joke to Foreigners.

"The America's cup was originally authorized, created, glorious mark for the preservation and advancement of true sport. Later it was seized by a band of 'cheap Johns' and 'society sportsmen,' as a device for their own uplifting, and since then it has been an eyesore to all American sports and a joke to all foreigners who know only one kind of sports.

"It matters little what the fundamental motive of the man or men who will rescue the great emblem of real international sport is. Whether it be a business advantage, or social advantage or revenge for past slights.

"It matters little as long as the result of years of their efforts will be redemption of the cup from its present ignominious and disgustingly cheap predicament.

"God speed any man, native or foreign, who can redeem America's cup and place it back upon the pedestal where Stevens so carefully and courageously placed it.

True Sports Will Applaud.

"God speed him. Certainly the American true sports will not only applaud and encourage efforts, but they will so energetically back him up to his efforts that the cheap cabal will be only too eager to make the basis of the next race a fair one, particularly a fair one to the challenger who crosses the big pond to compete.

"In my history of the America's cup, I went too deeply into the power of the trustees to make it necessary to repeat now, but I will say that if any man or men start out in dead earnest to have the existing conditions changed to fair conditions, the change can be brought about easily, pleasantly and without any real sport having to eat crow."

Reciprocity Means Justice For All Says Premier Laurier

IT would have been a crime against civilization for me to have rejected the reciprocity agreement. It is a measure along the lines of justice and equality for all, for which I stand. It was the Liberal party that discovered Canada. We won in 1896, in 1900 and in 1908. My work is not yet finished, and we will win again in 1911.—SIR WILFRID LAURIER, Premier of Canada.

Ty Cobb to Preach In New York Church

Famous Baseball Player Makes His First Ministerial Appearance To-night.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Christian baseball fans will have an opportunity to hear the famous "Ty" Cobb in the role of a preacher to-morrow night at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, 131 West 104th street. The pastor, Rev. Christian F. Reisner, has announced that Cobb will preach a baseball sermon and that the Detroit outfielder has promised to attend and "make a few well chosen remarks."

DEATH OF JOEL BENTON.

Poet and Essayist Was in His Eightieth Year.

Joel Benton, widely known as a writer of verse and essays for magazines and newspapers, is dead at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He was in his eightieth year. He had been in feeble health for several months. Joel Benton was born in Amenia, N. Y., on May 20, 1832. As an author his works have included "Emerson as a Poet," "The Truth About Pocahontas," "Stories on Lincoln," and "In the Poe Circle." He had done much work as poet and critic.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Retort Blows Up at Sumner, Me., One Man Killed.

SUMNER, Me., Sept. 16.—Herman McIntyre, aged forty, of New Gloucester, is dead and several others are injured, two fatally, as the result of the explosion of a retort in the corn shop of the Minot Packing Company at East Sumner. The building was not seriously damaged. Albert Poggi was burned and bruised about the arms and legs and Henry Bonney was also badly burned.

PAYMASTER KILLED.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—Jared Steen, paymaster for the Pittsburg Coal Company, was held up, shot dead and robbed just before 1 to-day near Reesta, about twelve miles out of the city. County detectives have been dispatched to the scene.

Steen was paymaster for the company's mines in this section and Saturday is the regular pay day. Steen carried with him several thousand dollars in cash.

'IF OPEN MARKETS OF THE U. S. WERE OFFERED TO ENGLAND,' HE ASKS, 'WOULD SHE REFUSE THEM?'

This Is the First Really Important Step Toward Bringing About Better Understanding Between English Speaking Nations to Further Prosperity. Maintain Peace and Advance Civilization"

The following letter, written in London by William Randolph Hearst, was printed in that city by the London Budget.

To the Editor of the London Budget:

LONDON, Sept. 16.—I have lately had the honor of being hanged in effigy by some so-called Conservatives of Canada for opinions upon the reciprocity question which I do not entertain.

I would therefore greatly appreciate the privilege of being allowed to express in your valued publication the opinions on that question which I actually do entertain.

I will not address myself to those self-styled Conservatives of Canada who display their calm and judicial conservatism by riotous and somewhat ridiculous acts of mob violence.

I will speak rather to the typical, intelligent, fair-minded citizens of Canada or Great Britain who are able to hear without prejudice, think without partiality and act without passion.

There is one, and only one, question in this Canadian election, and that is the question of reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada.

There is this question and no other legitimately to be debated and decided.

You, as intelligent Englishmen, know that this is so.

We, as intelligent Americans, know that this is so.

And the gentleman who denies that this is so either is not intelligent himself or does not credit his audience with intelligence.

The gentleman who insists upon discussing "Annexation" is a gentleman who is anxious to divert discussion from the real issue to a false issue, and whoever is anxious to distract attention from the real issue to a false issue is invariably an individual who is unable to maintain his position in open and honest discussion of the real issue.

There is not only no question of annexation involved in this election, but I doubt if there ever will be any question of "Annexation," strictly speaking, between the United States and Canada.

The word "Annexation" has a certain suggestion of force or compulsion about it and is not even properly used in this connection.

In my opinion, it should be discarded and some word of clearer and better meaning substituted.

I suggest the word "Union" or the word "Admission."

Among citizens of the same general character, with cordial inter-relations, the subjugation of either one by the other in this enlightened age is an absurd proposition, not seriously to be considered by [illegible].

[illegible] only possible "Union" seriously to be considered is the

"Admission" of the United States into the Dominion of Canada or the "Admission" of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada as States in the United States of America.

This admission of one nation to the privileges and advantages of the other nation could only be had upon the petition or application of one nation and the consent and approval of the other nation.

Even a Canadian Conservative in his lucid intervals must realize that no such application for admission on the part of the United States to Canada or on the part of Canada to the United States is being made or is being contemplated or is likely to be made or likely to be contemplated.

And if this application for admission is not being made nor being contemplated, why is the question dragged in as a leading issue in this campaign?

With this false issue of annexation properly understood and definitely dismissed it is possible to discuss the genuine issue of reciprocity upon its merits.

What is reciprocity?

It is the opening of the markets of the United States to the products of Canada and the opening of the markets of Canada to the products of the United States.

The people of the United States number ninety millions.

The people of Canada number nine millions.

Mr. Kipling writes to the people of Canada informing them that there is danger to this people of nine millions enjoying reciprocal trade relations with the people of ninety millions.

If Mr. Kipling could think as well as he can write, he would understand that a market of ninety million people is just ten times as valuable as a market of nine million people, and that Canada in this reciprocity treaty is receiving at least ten times the advantages that the United States is receiving.

I personally believe that Canada is receiving rather more than ten times the advantage of the United States, because the people of the United States are somewhat wealthier per capita than the people of Canada and will be able to buy more per capita of the products of Canada than the people of Canada will be able to buy of the products of the United States.

As for the danger, there is no more danger to the people of Canada in profiting by reciprocal trade relations with the United States than there is danger to Mr. Kipling in profiting by his United States copyrights.

He is only one individual as against ninety millions.

The odds are still more overwhelming, and yet nothing happens to him in his trade relations with the United States that he is not eager to have happen to him.

Mr. Kipling further advises the people of Canada to postpone the acceptance of these reciprocity arrangements to some future time.

Does any one with human intelligence imagine "if those overtures on the part of the United States for friendly and mutually profitable trade relations are insultingly rejected by Canada" that the United States will humiliate itself by renewing these overtures within the life of the present generation or within the memory of future generations?

No, the reciprocity, as far as it affects Canada, stands or falls on this election.

You who live in England and we who live in America have often heard at banquets to visiting Englishmen or Americans much elaborate eloquence in relation to hands stretched forth across the seas.

Is the English hand stretched forth toward America only to be withdrawn when an attempt is made to clasp it in friendship and closer association?

We have heard much sententious sentiment at these banquets about the advisability and advantage of a better understanding between English-speaking nations.

We have heard much high-sounding talk about the necessity of closer relations and more intimate associations between those nations for the promotion of progress and prosperity, for the extension of peace and the universal advantage of mankind.

Either that talk is genuine or it is fraudulent.

If it is fraudulent, it should be stopped now and forever.

If it is genuine, it should be put into some form of practical operation without any further windy words or waste of time.

I consider the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada the first really important step that has ever been taken to bring about a better understanding between English-speaking nations, to promote closer relations and more intimate associations, to further progress and to foster prosperity, to maintain peace and to advance civilization.

All who favor these lofty objects and prefer actual performance to empty profession should see in reciprocity the beginning of a movement to accomplish these ends.

Of course, Englishmen have an undeniable right to consider reciprocity, not only from the viewpoint of its advantage to Canada, but from the viewpoint of its advantage to England.

But I believe that any thoughtful and far-sighted Englishman will conclude that whatever is of notable advantage to a considerable portion of the British Empire must redound to the advantage of the whole Empire.

I believe, too, that every broad-minded Englishman will realize that any equable arrangement which tends to bring English-speaking peoples into closer relations will inevitably benefit England as much as it will any other of the parties concerned

Of course, Englishmen have furthermore the right to consider the possibility, remote though it may be, of union between Canada and the United States.

There obviously could be no union of Canada and the United States without the expressed desire of Canada, but it is conceivable that there might be a union of the two countries without the expressed desire of England.

To the Englishman who is disturbed by that possibility let me say that there is probably less likelihood of a union between the United States and Canada with a reciprocity treaty in force than without one.

If Canada, with the immense markets of the United States at her door, were denied access to them, Canada might contemplate a political union in order to gain access to them.

But if Canada already had access to the markets of the United States, that particular powerful incentive to political union would be removed.

Let me, in conclusion, ask Englishmen one direct question: If the open markets of the United States were offered to England would England refuse them?

And if not, why should Canada be advised to refuse them?

Reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada will certainly be of benefit to all directly or indirectly concerned.

Reciprocity will benefit the United States.

It will benefit England and it will especially benefit and profit Canada.

I have had one extensive and instructive trip to Canada.

I should like to go there again.

I should like to go after the reciprocity treaty will have been in operation for about a year and the Canadians will have begun to obtain and appreciate its full advantages.

I think that the person who would then be hanged in effigy even by the incendiaries of conservatism would be the person who would suggest to Canadians the advisability of abrogating the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

PREDICT WALKOVER FOR GOVERNOR FOSS

WORCESTER, Sept. 16.—Lively speeches in which it was predicted that Governor Foss would be reelected this year by a greater majority than he received last year characterized the gathering of the Worcester Democrats to-day at their annual outing at Edgemere on Lake Quinsigamond.

It was the biggest gathering the Democrats of this county have held in years and many remarks were made to the effect that it recalled the old campaigns of the late William E. Russell.

The chief speaker of the day was Congressman Michael F. Conry of New York, who said that the fact that President Taft was going to use information on his Western trip gathered by the Tariff Board seemed to justify the inference that this board might be utilized as a political instrument in behalf of the protected interests.

Frank J. Donahue and Edward H. Skelton, each seeking the nomination for secretary of state, had a lively set-to over the charge by Donahue that certain men were trying to dictate the nomination slate.

Hits At Tariff Board.

Congressman Conry, who came to Worcester after it was found Congressman William Sulzer would be unable to come, was accorded a rousing reception. He said:

"It is reported currently in the newspapers that the distinguished President of the United States in his western "swing around the circle" is going to utilize information collected by the tariff board in justification of his vetoes of the wool and cotton schedules," said Congressman Conry. "Congress has been adjourned a little less than one month. If this tariff board can furnish information to be used for political purposes now why could it not have furnished this information to Congress which was in session less than a month ago so that the country could have been relieved by remedial legislation from the burden of taxation under which it has labored during so many years of Republican misrule?

"This fact, gentlemen, is significantly illuminating and may justify the inference that this so-called tariff board may be utilized as a political instrumentality in behalf of the protected interests of the Republican party."

David I. Walsh, a candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor, in the course of his speech, said:

Sees Democratic Harmony.

"The political situation in Massachusetts from the Democratic view point is brighter to-day than it has ever been before at this period of a campaign. We are united, our organizations are strong and the enthusiasm for our party among the voters is a wonderful thing.

"I have just returned from a three days' tour through the Berkshires for the purpose of observing party conditions in that part of the Commonwealth. I found our organization in splendid shape. Governor Foss will receive a greatly increased vote in western Massachusetts this year.

"The Republican party is in fine condition as it is here, is hopelessly divided. On every side there is the spirit of a strong fight for control of the party. Indeed, already many progressive Republicans do not hesitate to openly indorse the candidacy of the Democratic candidates and in the Democratic primaries few of them will vote at the primaries. The issue with the great names of Independent voters is going to be, Should Governor Foss's administration be approved? and the emphatic verdict will be shown by a majority greater than last year."

Chairman McDonald of the State Committee pointed out the value of organization in every voting precinct throughout the State.

Donahue Scores Methods.

Frank J. Donahue, a candidate for Secretary of State, referred to what he characterized as the "grandiose and grandiloquent methods he is being compelled to adopt in his campaign, saying such methods were made necessary by the refusal of many citizens of making up the party slate. These methods, he declared, he would take no man from his fireside and put him in the field against him.

Edward H. Skelton, who is opposing Mr. Donahue for the nomination, poked considerable fun at the latter's implied reference to his physical condition and promised that if given the nomination he would make a whirlwind campaign and put up the liveliest sort of a campaign slumping the State itself and stay it such a campaign became necessary.

Among other orators of the day who greeted the party heart was Congressman Joseph F. Thayer of Worcester. He said:

"The people are aroused and have got to have a distribution of tariff, and if this reduction is obstructed by the present congress in 1912 I believe it will be such a sweep that once again the commonsense will come into its own and will receive the tribute of justice. The candid word industry demands a revision of the tariff and a reduction of the tariff, and while it has asserted that the tariff has been reformed by La Follette bill was not sufficiently protective for their interests; even if the seals had been removed from the lips of Samuel R. Bale, once an adviser of the tariff board, important information could have been given to Congress which would have gone far toward adjusting whatever inequalities there are in the measure."

Banquet to Candidates.

There was disappointment because Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston was not present. He sent word he could not because he had to start for the West. The outing was managed by Chairman Charles F. Campbell of the Worcester Democratic City Committee.

The Boston guests besides those already mentioned were Congressman Andrew J. Peters, Congressman James A. Gallagher, Congressman Eugene N. Foss, and Charles R. Strecker, of Brookline. Mr. Strecker also is a candidate for the State auditor.

Congressman Conry and the State ticket candidates were given a dinner and reception at the Bay State Hotel after the outing.

WHITE ASSAILS MACHINE.

Frothingham, He Says, Has Done Nothing for People.

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 16.—Norman H. White resumed his attack upon Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham and the Republican State machine at a rally in City Hall here to-night. Mr. White stated that the intent of the direct primary bill was to give the people an opportunity to decide upon candidates for the several offices to be voted for, and followed up this statement with the charge that certain members of the State machine were responsible for nullifying the intent of this bill by forcing upon the people candidates whose votes on public questions and legislative work is of such an nature that he would lead the Republican party to disaster if nominated.

He declared that the Republican machine has been successful to the extent of preventing Mr. Walker and himself from presenting their views to the people, and the only candidate who has been afforded the privilege is Lewis A. Frothingham, a man who never did anything to benefit the people.

MRS. LASSEN SUED; ORDERED FROM HOME

Facing Divorce Action, Inventor's Wife Forced to Leave Home With Belongings.

So tidkly came her troubles upon Mrs. Catherine Lassen, wife of a wealthy East Weymouth inventor and manufacturer yesterday, that it looked to her as if she were cast adrift upon another's bleak world. Then, when Mrs. Lassen had informed that her husband had filed notice for a divorce, last night came the climax, when she hurriedly packed her personal belongings and made a hasty exit from the Sewall Bates estate mansion on Broad street in East Weymouth after her husband, Victor Lassen, had ordered her out of the house.

"And if you don't get out, I'll throw your things into the street myself," he admitted telling her.

Several days ago Mrs. Lassen was arrested on a charge of assaulting a servant in her house. She was locked up in a cell in the Hingham jail awaiting trial. Neither her husband nor her children would visit her and, Yesterday morning she was taken to the District Court at Quincy to face her accusers. With her was her attorney, J. J. McManus of Quincy.

Later in the day Mrs. Lassen, still accompanied by Lawyer McManus, went to her home. Words passed, and she was told to pack up and get out immediately.

A second visit followed the first. Chiding that she could hardly harm would be done here, Mrs. Lassen was told that Attorney McManus had ordered her out. Attorney Guy Hines of Boston, counsel for the husband, also was present. With him was a servant girl who formed the "consignment." Mrs. Lassen was permitted to go to her room, fill three big trunks, and have an expressman take them to a neighbor's house. Then she left the residence by the side door. She went up the carriage road from the house over which she had been the mistress since her marriage thirteen years ago.

Mrs. Lassen spent last night at the home of Mrs. Alice Schofield, a neighbor. She was given her first warning of the coming divorce suit today. Attorney Guy Hines of Boston, counsel for the husband, also was present. With him was a servant girl who formed the "consignment." Mrs. Lassen was permitted to go to her room, fill three big trunks, and have an expressman take them to a neighbor's house. Then she left the residence by the side door. She went up the carriage road from the house over which she had been the mistress since her marriage thirteen years ago.

Mrs. Lassen spent last night at the home of Mrs. Alice Schofield, a neighbor. She was given her first warning of the coming divorce suit today. Attorney Guy Hines of Boston, counsel for the husband, also was present. With him was a servant girl who assisted Mrs. Lassen of assault. Informed Judge Avery that the case was settled yesterday with the clerk of the Norfolk County Court, Mrs. Lassen was released. Several days ago Mrs. Lassen was arrested on a charge of assaulting a servant in her house. She was locked up in a cell in the Hingham jail awaiting trial. Neither her husband nor her children would visit her and, Yesterday morning she was taken to the District Court at Quincy to face her accusers. With her was her attorney, J. J. McManus of Quincy.

Later in the day Mrs. Lassen, still accompanied by Lawyer McManus, went to her home. Words passed, and she was told to pack up and get out immediately.

A second visit followed the first. Chiding that she could hardly harm would be done here, Mrs. Lassen was told that Attorney McManus had ordered her out. GREAT MASSACRE IN CHINA FEARED Widespread Mutiny in Army in South; Pestilence Adds to Horrors of Famine.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16.—A serious mutiny has broken out in the Chinese army of the southern military zone, where anarchy reigns following the floods throughout the Kiukiang district in the Szechwan provinces.

Thousands of soldiers who were ordered to the relief work in the Yang-Tse-Kiang valley, where thousands of square miles are in the inundation, refuse to obey their commanders and instead of marching and burning the dead bodies, they are allowing the corpses to putrify in the open.

The soldiers are feeding in the valley in Kiukiang Bay, where the dead bodies are rotting, adding its horrors to the agony of starvation.

At least 8,000 soldiers have joined the native bands in the past two days, taking with them their arms and ammunition. In this manner the gangs of bandits and high bloodmen who are hosting the country and looting, delighting in burning and murdering defenseless men, women and children are gradually becoming an army.

Military districts from the interior report that Liking Fu and Wuchi are still in a state of siege to-day and that the military and civilian population in the city was without food. Five thousand rebels and bands of brigands have occupied the city's walls. They threatened to massacre the entire garrison and civilians if the relief expedition of the valiant reshaiser it has made.

PRESIDENT AT ERIE URGES PEACE PACTS

Defends Treaties Before Great Audience, Following His Arrival From Syracuse.

EDITOR GRAVES SPEAKS

Praises and Criticises President and Declares People Must Be Real Rulers.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 16.—President Taft arrived here from Syracuse, N. Y., late today, and while evening addressed a great meeting of citizens, talking for his subject the arbitration treaties negotiated between this country and England and France, now held up in the United States Senate. Mr. Taft hopes to bring out the sentiment of the people on these treaties and he believes this sentiment is strong enough to sway the senate eventually to the approval of the compacts. His speech was a strong defence of the treaties.

John Preston Graves, of the New York American, as a guest of honor, followed President Taft with a fearless, independent speech. He said:

Mr. Graves's Speech.

"I am personally fond of President Taft. The New York American, as well, in its redoubled way, approves every whole thing about the President, and as frankly condemns every mistaken act.

"We stand, whole heartedly, with the Democratic party, and with him to pass the tariff measure. We stood the President by with the Democratic country to compel his vote on the 'wool' bill. It is good for President Taft and for us that he is here to-night. I believe it is a good thing for the President to go around eating and drinking and talking with the people. It democratizes the government. It brings the chief executive near. The President has to face with the actual sovereign, the people. It is a good thing for the people to pull off his hat to the President of the United States. It is a better thing for the President of the United States to stand uncovered in the presence of the people.

People Must Rule.

"For the people are, and must be more and more sovereign. The crown torn from the despot rests not in the aggressive power of privilege, has been restored through public opinion and a parliamentary revolution. It must never be lost again to the people's royal line.

"The whole spirit of the age sets to the enfranchisement of the people to their sovereign right to rule. Newspapers and education are cheaper than bread, and information is the qualification for the effective power. It is a question of free time and of free voting. Neither parties nor precincts control the people's ballots which express the people's judgments and their will. They think as they please and vote as they please. And their thinking and their voting are spiritual now and soon the last battlefield of popular sovereignty in the three great principles of a modern and progressive democracy.

"It is a great thing for those of the great States in which to protect the progressive needs of the people that the Pennsylvania Legislature wrangled over six months of empty talk, and that the bills introduced to fill 20,000 pages, 100 volumes of 200 pages each, could not be read over and certainly, no man thought the pendulous mass of legislation.

The Whirlwind Finish.

"Not a single measure of large public policy was passed; but a whole host of appropriation bills, private and partisan, went jarring and trading through the two houses, many of them on the last night of the session, in the whirlwind finish of public business, a lamentable and dangerous scandalous expression of the spirit of legislation. The city and state of Philadelphia, the six cities of the suburbs and the large of the hoodlum supremacy in Reform and Happy Hooligan control the Governor and Solons and Lycurgus in the intelligent assembly of the second Commonwealth of the Republic.

"In New York the overwhelming vote of the Democratic party goes with the representatives of the Republican party in defying and betraying the formal and official pledges which the party carried from the State convention of both parties and the Republican and Democratic trades shamelessly in office and the spoils of office, while the lord paramount leader of both parties exacted Tammany's infamous pound of flesh from every piece of important legislation.

"The duty of American democracy and of American safety is from public office and public people. The appeal is to the electorate is from the hasty, pulpy, and in the case of the legislature of representatives in New York and Pennsylvania, to the people and the sound judgment of the people.

"They are the highest and lead the Republic and the legislature and the legislature which records the people's needs to the sovereignty which passes their enactment or condemnation, as I say to the President of the President, the recall, which withdraws unworthy representatives from the people's service.

STRANGE SUICIDE OF NEWTON WOMAN

Much mystery surrounds the death of Miss Mary Henley, a domestic in the family of A. W. Hall, No. 775 Commonwealth avenue, Newton Centre, who was found Friday night, face downward, in a bath tub full of water. The case was entered on the blotter at the police station as "suicide by drowning." Medical Examiner West last night made the following statement: "There is no doubt in my mind that it was a case of suicide. The girl was perfectly sound in every respect, and no motive for her act is apparent."

STRUCK BY EXPRESS, PROBABLY WILL DIE

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Sept. 16.—William T. Moore of No. 44 Cleveland street will probably die of injuries received by being struck by an express train here Friday night, face downward, in a bath tub full of water. The case was entered on the blotter at the police station as "suicide by drowning." Medical Examiner West last night made the following statement: "There is no doubt in my mind that it was a case of suicide. The girl was perfectly sound in every respect, and no motive for her act is apparent."

AVIATOR NIEUPORT DIES FROM INJURIES

VERDUN, France, Sept. 16.—Edouard Nieuport, the French aviator, died to-day as a result of internal injuries received when he fell with the machine yesterday. Nieuport accomplished some notable feats when flying at Chalons. Last June, competing in the preliminaries for the international aviation cup, he established a new aerodrome record, covering 80 miles at the rate of 80 miles an hour.

He finished third in the contest for this cup, which was won by the American, Charles T. Weymann, in 1:4 Eastchurch, 1912 land.

CAVALIERI TO SING IN OPERA AT BOSTON

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Lina Cavalieri is to sing in Boston this season, it developed in an interview she gave to-day on the dock that has developed over the offer of Robert W. Chanler to give her $70,000 for a consideration of her marriage settlement and her consent to a divorce.

"Of course, if want to go back to America," the diva said. "I have already a contract to sing in Mexico in February, and as I shall be going by the way of Boston, I will make the opportunity to fulfill a long delayed promise to Henry Russell to sing ten times for him at the Boston Opera House."

BRAKEMAN THROWN FROM TOP OF CAR

WORCESTER, Sept. 16 — John W. Bonnell, forty-five, married, of No. 167 Lincoln street, and employed as a freight brakeman by the Boston & Albany Railroad, was thrown from the top of a freight car, by the jar of a sliding clutch yesterday, rolling down a twenty-five foot embankment. He was taken to St. Vincent's hospital, where he was found to have sustained a hemorrhage of the brain which paralyzed his entire left side, as well as numerous contusions. His recovery is doubtful.

BOYS INJURED BY A CONCUSSION CAP

Three Dorchester boys were painfully injured last night by the explosion of a concussion cap which the youngsters found on Dorchester avenue. The cap came in contact with a stone and exploded. The boys, Danny Dineen, aged five years, his brother Christopher, aged two and one-half years, and Willie Harrigan, aged eight years, were returning to their homes when they discovered the cap. Willie Harrigan was swinging the explosive when it hit a stone. The youngster's legs were badly burned.

DICTIONARY

that has ever been made

Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary Of the English Language

For school, office and home use. Compare it with any Dictionary offered by our competitors.

PRINTING—Printed in large, clear type, on very thin and tough Bible paper, imported specially for this book. Although it contains 1225 pages, this Dictionary is much thinner than the ordinary book, the size being 7½x8¾x1¾ inches.

BINDING—It is bound in very choice, flexible French seal leather, with red under gold edges, and is indexed throughout with Dennison's patent thumb index. This index usually adds from 15c to 35c to the retail price of a dictionary.

COLORED PLATES—There are many full pages of very fine colored plates, such as National Flags, Coats of Arms, Army and Navy Insignia, Famous Gems, Types of the Human Race, Decorations of Honor, etc.

THE APPENDIX consists of many valuable features, such as an orthoepical dictionary of prefixes and suffixes, a word building explained, foreign words and phrases, of abbreviations and contractions, arbitrary signs used in printing and writing, hints on spelling, how to punctuate, a dictionary of grammatical terms, 2000 homonyms, familiar allusions, mistakes in English corrected, a dictionary of faulty diction, Christian names and their origin and meaning, how to use capital letters, symbols used in medicine and pharmacy, and the new census.

Before investing in any other Dictionary, no matter by whom offered, it will pay you to investigate this one. Each one comes in a good, strong box for mailing or expressing. It is a regular $2.50 dictionary, and we offer it for only 89c

By mail, 17c extra.

The illustrations at the left and right show two of these exclusive, new models at $17.50. There are 12 distinct styles in all. The more critically you examine these suits the more favorably you will appreciate the highly skilled workmanship. Every seam will bear the closest scrutiny of the keenest eye. The suits fit beautifully, perfectly—as though made to measure by the high-priced tailor, and are better than are displayed around town for less than $25.00. In addition there are

New Ideas in Coats and Skirts

The linings and trimmings are the best—Peau de Cygne and Skinner Satin lined. The materials merit special mention:

Natty Scotch Tweeds, Durable Lymansville Cheviots, High Lustre Broadcloths, Quiet Serges and Worsteds

In the assortment of colors this collection of suits is all that could be desired, every new Fall shade being represented. Also a fine assortment of navy and black. After careful comparison with suits now being offered elsewhere at similar prices, we can state emphatically that the equal of these suits are not in Boston at $17.50.

BOY FATALLY HURT BY WALTHAM AUTO

Nine-Year-Old Freddie Crowe Is Run Over While on Errand for Mother.

Nine-year-old Freddie Crowe of Waltham was run over and fatally hurt by an automobile near his home last night while on an errand for his mother to buy some fruit for supper. The boy is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crowe of No. 7 Maple Hall avenue, Waltham.

The automobile which struck the boy is owned and operated by Edward Ingold, superintendent of the Waltham Piano Co., and Ivy Walker, Mr. Ingold lives at No. 189 Rice street, Waltham. He was just turning with Mrs. Ingold and some lady friends from the football game between Waltham and the Bentley High School team on the Waltham athletic field. Mr. Ingold went to the police station after the accident and was exonerated after the details of the accident were known.

When Detective Chief Alfred Hall arrived at the scene of the accident in Mr. Ingold's car the boy was lying directly in front of the automobile. Detective Chief Hall ordered the boy taken to the police station. He was then taken to the office of Dr. Joseph Hall, who said that the boy's left leg was fractured near the thigh and that he suffered concussion of the brain. Dr. Hall ordered the boy removed to the Waltham Hospital.

Mr. Ingold said that the boy jumped into the automobile suddenly, and that the accident was unavoidable. After the boy had been taken to the hospital, word was brought to the Crowe home that the boy had been run down by an automobile, and Mr. Crowe, accompanied by a friend, hurried to the hospital to communicate with the lad. After reaching there and seeing the boy's mother and another woman relative in tears, the children's father became excited and friends advised that he remain away.

1,200 LACKAWANNA TRACKMEN STRIKE

Head of Brotherhood Declares All Work Will Be Stopped Unless Road Yields.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 16.—In consequence of the strike order from A. B. Lemon, National President of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, 1,200 Lackawanna Railroad track laborers, foremen and laborers employed by the Lackawanna Railroad have laid down their tools in sympathy with their fellow workmen in Buffalo, Rochester and other cities, and the entire system of this road is tied up.

Unanimously following the strike order issued by the national guards are disciplined over the system and they are prepared to see that the strikers do not molest the property of the railroad company. The strike order was issued by the national officers of the brotherhood in Buffalo, N. Y., and was received by the local officers of the brotherhood here. The strike was ordered because of the refusal of President Lotty that this company would be allowed to negotiate with the brotherhood in regard to the company's contract with the men. The men demand that the company sign a contract with the brotherhood, which the company refuses to do.

"Should any attempt be made to operate trains over the Lackawanna Railroad, we will be compelled to interfere," was the statement made by Colonel Boyle, commanding officer of the national guard, when asked what would be done in case the company attempted to run trains. "We have been ordered to protect the property of the railroad company, and we will do so. We will not molest anyone unless they attempt to molest the property of the railroad company. We will be compelled to interfere if any attempt is made to operate trains over the Lackawanna Railroad."

REV. DR. LEONARD TURNS 88.

Receives Congratulations of Many Friends on Birthday.

The Rev. ACTOR VILLA IS CLOSED.

NEWPORT, Sept. 16.—Tommy Hodge, chauffeur to Frederick Vanderbilt, and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, the former's daughter, left Newport for Hyde Park, N. Y., this morning, where they will join Colonel and Mrs. Vanderbilt, who motored there yesterday. Miss Vanderbilt's maid, Miss Mary Hodge, sister of Tommy Hodge, left Newport for New York City this morning to join Mrs. Vanderbilt's maid, who went to New York yesterday.

MISS BERTA NICHOLS, VIOLINIST, TO MARRY

Announcement of Engagement to C. H. Goodidge interests Music Circles.

An engagement of great interest to musical circles in this city, and which comes as a great surprise, was announced yesterday by Miss Berta Nichols, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard B. Nichols of Coolidge street, Hyde Park, and C. Harold Goodidge, of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

Miss Nichols is one of the violinists of the Symphony Ladies' Orchestra, and is often the soloist on occasions. She is also a graduate of Radcliffe College, and a member of the Professional Women's Club. Last year she was much praised for her clever and artistic reading of the "Kreutzer" Sonata, which she played at the Memorial Day exercises held in Symphony Theatre.

For the past three years Miss Nichols has been identified with Miss Maud Powell as a composer and the author of the "Powell Violin Method."

Mr. Goodidge is a graduate of Harvard University, and is a member of the Harvard Musical Association. He is also a member of the Harvard Glee Club, and has been for several years. He graduated from a visit to Digby, Nova Scotia, where he has a summer home, and is a member of the Digby Yacht Club.

SOLDIERS GIVE FOOD TO ETNA'S VICTIMS

River of Lava Flows Like Water and the Explosions Are Deafening.

CATANIA, Sicily, Sept. 16.—Military authorities were dealt out today to the victims of Mount Etna's eruption which has wiped out the homes and crops of thousands of peasants and villagers. Soldiers are carrying out these relief measures under directions of the war ministry.

The darkness of night long over the slopes of the mountain today, the sun being obscured by the dense clouds of smoke which continuously roll upward from the crater. The river of lava which is streaming from the hundred fissures continues to increase in volume. Fears are expressed by scientists that the eruption of the volcano is the precursor of a violent earthquake, as in past years severe eruptions of Mt. Etna have usually preceded serious earthquakes.

An attempt to ascend Mount Etna was made today, but it was impossible to get nearer than fifty feet from one of the craters owing to the intense heat and thick smoke in which no one could live. The eruption of lava continues. Near the source the river of lava flows swiftly almost like water, and quickly cools on the surface, and solidifies, but the molten material men who ran along its edge. Farther down the volcano's sides the lava cools gradually and thickening it divides into four principal streams and loses much of its velocity.

Glen Shirt & Collar Co.
121 TREMONT ST.

Opening New Fall Shirt Waists

During the present week we are going to put on sale our new Fall waists in silk, laces, flannels, lingeries and tailored. The variety is larger than ever, with some very unique and individual styles. In the past we have tried to make the TREMONT and MATINEE WAIST better than any other make, but it would seem that this season we have eclipsed all our past efforts.

Infants' Department--Fall Opening

In our infants' department we cater to children up to four years of age. The pretty hats and bonnets, the dainty shoes and sox, the warm sweaters and coats and the lovely dresses and two-piece suits are all so attractive, there is a great temptation to put big prices on these, as the large stores do, but we have used this department to build up our business and so with small profits we have accomplished more in three years than we would otherwise have done in ten. If you would see some of the two-piece galatea suits we offer at 98c and some of the galatea rompers we sell at 49c, you would have all the proof you need of our method of doing business.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper, and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 100,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

It isn't what you pay for advertising that counts, it's what advertising pays you. Advertising that pays is the only cheap advertising; advertising that doesn't pay is dear at any price. Advertising in the AMERICAN pays best, therefore it is the cheapest.

A Linon Waist which for the good quality of material, the workmanship, finish and fit easily ranks with waists of higher price.

An All-Silk Messaline Waist, made in kimono style with large flower and spray embroidered by hand across the front. A loose effect front and back is outlined by hand embroidery. 1.98

The Entire Front of This Messaline Waist is Pin Tucked and Heavily Braided to give a chemisette effect. Silk embroidered net is used in the yoke and collar. 1.98

In This Messaline Waist, novelty of style and practical service are combined. The unique double frill gives a finish that is different. 1.98

The Heavy Hand Embroidery on the fine tucking of this messaline waist renders it suitable for practical and informal wear. 3.98

Heavy Silk Chiffon Over Silk with yoke, collar and cuffs of embroidered net, enriched by a deep braided yoke front and back. 3.98

This Waist of Braided Silk Net over Jap silk is very dressy. Outlining the yoke and extending down the front and back is a rich design, made of rat-tail and soutache braids. 1.98

This Dainty Batiste Waist is richly trimmed with Val. laces and Swiss emb. motifs in the form of yoke and panel; the crocheted buttons and knotted cord add to the general effectiveness. 1.98

A Waist Made of Pure Linen, with hand-embroidered panels in small design and the plain shirt sleeve and shirt front. 1.98

This Waist is of Marquisette, with the new set-in Peasant sleeve; the rich use of laces and motifs makes this waist suitable for the more formal occasions. 2.98

Pure Irish Linen is Used in This Waist---Sprays of hand embroidery are worked on each side of front, which is given fullness by a Gibson plait. 2.98

WE CARRY A VARIETY OF STYLES IN MESSALINE AND TAFFETA

In addition to our wonderful special sales and distinctive regular full lines, we shall show unusual patterns in silk, individual novelty waists and silk coatblouses. A feature found in almost all our novelty waists with the wide frill is that they are finished so as to be wearable even when the frill is removed.

THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF WAISTS

SAMPLE SILK WAISTS, 5.00 VALUE FOR 1.98

$2.98 TO $5.00 SILK WAISTS FOR $1.98—A phenomenal lot of high-grade sample waists in taffeta, messaline and Jap silk. Every waist has a distinctive feature, be it silk laces and the new frill, hand-embroidery, heavy braiding, novelty button and loop trimming, unique muffs or rich Venise laces and yokes. Not one of these waists was made to retail for less than $2.98, and the majority regularly sold for $3.98 and $4.98. The materials alone could not be obtained for the price we ask it this sale. In both suit and rich evening shades . . . 1.98

In addition to our wonderful special sales and distinctive regular full lines, we shall show innovations of the side frill. Point ruche, raglan sleeve, fringe trimming, novelty combinations of net and glass button trimming.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS FORENOONS

HOTEL PROPRIETOR MINISTER QUITS

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 16.—Parishioners of the Rev. John Mason of Guysboro, who sojourned at his Summer cottage in Cohasset, having been sent bills for their board, spread about comments that led him to have his resignation which he is being referred to the Missionary Board of the Primitive Methodist Church. The parishioners said he scolded them. This the pastor denied. He said they were the thing him in such numbers that he had set sent out board bills he would have had his whole parish at his residence.

LIBERALS MOVE FOR MEXICAN INVASION

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 16.—Early today a body of about 100 Mexicanistas crossed the river near the smelter and advanced on the western outskirts of Ciudad Juarez, with the avowed intention of attacking. Troops are heavily armed, and their intention is reported to be to seize the arsenal of the Mexican Central railways to prevent the coming of more troops into Juarez today from Chihuahua. Other liberals are reported to have crossed the line near Columbus, N. M., early today with arms.

Wins Cup for Fourth Time.

BROCKTON, Sept. 16.—Route A. Fred won the President's cup at the Brockton Country club this afternoon from Harry W. Flagg, 3 and 2 to play. It is the fourth time that Fred has won the trophy. The match was a 36-hole affair, and Fred led from the start and made the course in to value. Flagg's best round was 41 on the third, naturally afternoon when she dropped dead.

SEPARATION SUIT AGAINST MIDDLETON

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—John A. Middleton, first vice president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and director in more than twenty banks and industrial corporations, was named as defendant today for a separation suit brought by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Middleton, for a separation. The complaint charges cruelty and desertion, it is said. Mr. Middleton is now residing for some time at the Waldorf-Astoria. While the complaint does not specify the complained states, they have been made known to counsel. His name has been stricken and memoes.

STRANDED SCHOONER DRAGGED OFF LEDGE

How the coasting schooner Julia Berkley was driven on the ledges almost in front of Boston Light and remained there for 6 hours or more in constant danger of being dashed to pieces, and all on board but sold by Captain Kemp of the tug Hercules, who went to the assistance of the schooner when he arrived in port yesterday.

The schooner was not in the tug the days of the report of Captain Kemp, but from Calais, Me., to Nantucket and Captain John Anderson decided to put into Boston. On the way he ran to the ledge. The seas broke over the little vessel's three boats, threatening to wash Captain Anderson, his son and the crew overboard.

In attempting to get near the schooner to attach a line over and over the tug was overborne. Finally Captain Kemp sent his small row boat with three men, who reached the craft after a perilous trip.

C. F. KING GLAD TO BE AT BRIDGEWATER

Carleton F. King, the former Boston stockbroker who was sent to Charlestown State Prison on an indeterminate sentence of from ten to fourteen years for larceny from customers, is rapidly improving in health and spirits since his transference to the State Hospital at Bridgewater. King was sent to Bridgewater last Tuesday for medical and psychiatric observation and treatment. He was reported yesterday as being much more comfortable. He is fond of the farm life, both for the change to the hospital and for the comfort physical attention he can receive. He is not confined to his bed, so Mrs. King and others who are striving to obtain a pardon for King from Governor Foss are confident that the goal which they intend to make on the ground that King's confinement in prison has been to King, will be urged upon favorable ears. They will also urge that King, like other patients at Bridgewater,

YOUR UPSET, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH IS RELIEVED IN A FEW MOMENTS.

Every family here ought to keep some Diapepsin in the house, as any of you may have an attack of indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach. Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach trouble.

THREE REPUBLICAN RIVALS AT FEAST

Walker, White and Frothingham Greet Norfolk County Republican Club.

There was a political chicken dinner at Moran's Squantum inn yesterday afternoon. Among those present were the three Republican candidates for Governor, and Congressman Weeks, State Senator Pearson and the boys from Brookline, Quincy and other places in Norfolk County. Every year the Norfolk County Republican Club has a shore dinner at Squantum and meets the big politicians. This was it.

Squantum inn is a pretty place. It is swept by ocean breezes, and the steamed clams and broiled chicken are fine. After such a dinner one is ready to go to sleep, listen to speeches, or sit in an easy chair looking out on the pleasant waters of Dorchester Bay.

About forty more Norfolk County Republicans showed up than were expected and they had to crowd them into the dining room until they looked like Democratic sardines.

At the head table they places the three candidates, Walker, White and Frothingham with large, well selected Norfolk County folks placed between them—sort of human buffers.

Frothingham Explains.

After dinner Senator George Pearson, who presided, proposed that the party move out upon the verandas and let the candidates prate in the open air. Governor Foss never vetoed anything quicker than the noble three turned down this proposition. Seems like the only place where there was a chance to save their voices by talking indoors. Never was there such a bamesters got out and looked over the pleasant waters of the bay, while the others found secluded corners, but most of them stayed in and listened to the talk.

Senator Pearson called on Lieutenant-Governor Louis Frothingham, who explained his hoarseness by saying that he caught cold looking at a woman sailing into a tub of water at a recent county fair. "It seems that even a man can't tell if it hits the bull's eye the lady who sits on a trapeze falls into the tub," said Mr. Frothingham. "I threw a ball myself, I confessed."

Frothingham went on to be polite to Walker and White, and announced that he was going to support whoever might be nominated for Governor by the Republicans.

Next occurred Speaker Walker. He said that President Taft was a great friend that he was for him. He was strong for biting the Grand Trunk to Boston and for Reciprocity with Canada. And he thought if he was grand jury foreman he would indict universal peace as a result of the arbitration treaty.

Walker for Peace.

Mr. Walker loves universal peace, and he looked significantly at his adversaries as he talked. Great! It is time said that the finances of the State ought to be reformed and he was the man to do it.

He also would support every act of his party and soul whatever was in it.

Norman White was the next Declaimer. He was plainly worried because his two opponents hadn't attacked him on the open ends air back, and he called their attention to Foss. It seems that he and Foss as the walls talk, are on the same platform at the Billerica Fair on Friday. Maybe it was some other fair or some other rate. It was a couple of days. Norman entertained the audience with a long detail how he put it all over Foss on that occasion and showed himself a true friend of the farmer.

It looked as though the Norfolk County crowd were stacked for Frothingham because he got the real enthusiastic hand. White had his friends.

Congressman John W. Weeks held forth for a while, and then Norman White jumped into his automobile and started for Gloucester where he entered the party in an hour if he escaped arrest for speeding.

About 5:30 a couple of trolley cars arrived, which were full of folks who were ling up, although several promising young politicians were yet to be heard from.

A terrible thing happened to Grafton Cushing on the way home. A young politician, who looked like a Democrat, came up, bit him with a cyclone right on the back, called him "Cushy," and "Old Top," and got everybody looking. Just as Mr. Cushing was going to be next in the friendly person nominated him for Speaker of the House, and the smile that followed was like the face was like a sunrise over a Swiss lake.

Paducah Going to Cuba.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 16.—The Navy Department has assigned the gunboat Paducah to survey duty on the Cuban coast the coming Winter in place of the U. S. S. Hist, ordered to the navy list to be sold. The expedition will leave about October 15 for Southern waters.

COURSE OF LECTURES FOR STENOGRAPHERS

General Education for Boston Women In Mutual Aid Association.

Originally formed to provide sick and death insurance at reasonable rates to the women stenographers of Boston, the Stenographers' Mutual Aid Association has included in its program for the coming season a course of lectures as an aid in the development of thrift.

Dr. Blanche A. Dodg, medical director at the Durant gymnasium and a prominent factor in American medical circles, is scheduled to deliver the first of these lectures at Perkins Hall, No. 264 Boylston street, Thursday evening, September 28, at 7:30 o'clock. Her subject will be "Health and Hygiene," and the meeting will be free to all.

Dr. Dodg and Miss Alice H. Grady, private secretary to Louis D. Brandeis, are taking an active interest in the upbuilding of the association, which today has fifty members and carries a savings bank life insurance policy of $100 on each girl enrolled.

In the near future it also is purposed to have a course in first aid to the sick. All Class A members, who will pay 10 cents a week dues, and $5 a week for Class B girls on a 20 cent weekly due, become beneficiaries for girl stenographers, Dr. Dodg says.

In an article written for the Sunday AMERICAN on the necessity of thrift, a selection for girl stenographers, Dr. Dodg says:

Dr. Denig's Statement.

"I am very glad to be able to contribute a word to the development of the Stenographers' Mutual Benefit Association. In my opinion it is particularly necessary that every girl should have a fair knowledge of the fundamental principles governing good health—to learn how to keep well, and then how to keep well, for the foundation of efficiency in business must rest on sound health of body.

"We hope that the girls will be greatly benefited by the talks which are to be given on methods of saving and investing, and also on the average family budget, so as to give opportunities to invest her earnings safely in small amounts. I consider the opportunity offered by the Massachusetts Savings Banks insurance plan one of the most significant events of our generation.

"For the first time in our history it is possible to provide, by means of small monthly payments, protection against the contingencies by which the earning period shall have passed, and anything which can in any way help to educate the young women of Boston a knowledge of this important, yet simple, matter is to be welcomed.

"From all points of view we think the organization a pretty good thing, and would like everybody to know about it."

Miss Alice H. Grady, whose activity was mainly responsible for the formation of the association, says:

Mrs. Grady's Endorsement.

"To my mind one of the most hopeful developments of our generation is the interest which women are manifesting in the subject of thrift. Concerning the problems of the future—sickness, accident, unemployment and old age—women have heretofore been so busily engaged in the present that they have not given the matter the consideration which it deserves.

JAIL GRAFT CHARGED BY REV. MR. BAYLISS

Minister, Freed After Serving Sentence for Libel, Complains to Governor.

Graft, unsanitary conditions, bugs, "embalmed eggs," tampering with fruit sent to prisoners, and rubber-soled "sneaking" upon the prisoners are among the charges made against the Middlesex County House of Correction or East Cambridge Jail to Governor Foss by the Rev. Eben E. Bayliss of Somerville.

Mr. Bayliss was released from that institution September 6, after serving a sentence of eight days in default of a $250 fine which was imposed upon him after he was convicted of criminally libelling ex-Mayor John H. Woods of Somerville.

Among the "graft" charges made by Mr. Bayliss in the striking one that cloth ing is made, repaired and pressed in the jail shops, "not only for the officers but for their wives and families."

During Mr. Bayliss' term in jail his wife, who is sixty-two years old, was forced to do washing, ironing and scrubbing for a living.

The letter in which Mr. Bayliss makes his charges against the East Cambridge jail and its officials is as follows:

Rev. Mr. Bayliss's Letter.

"To His Excellency Governor Eugene N. Foss.

"I have just been released from the Middlesex County House of Correction, where I was serving an alternative penalty of three months on an alleged criminal libel charge. And, while in that institution, my observation continued me that certain things exist there that ought to be otherwise.

"To my astonishment upon entering the institution, I discovered that no medical examination was made upon my case. And, upon information, I found that even men sentenced to periods of five years were not examined.

"The sanitary conditions are exceedingly poor.

"In what is known as the rank cells, from No. 1 to 11, inclusive, during the day the beds are dressed with white comforters and pillow shams and these cells are for exhibition purposes, for impressing favorably visitors who are curious in examining the comforts of the prisoners. To the contrary, up one flight of stairs conditions exist which are simply indicated in the stained and bloody appearance of printed cards containing the rules for the prisoners hanging upon the wall. The institution is infested with multitudinous bugs, the sprinkling process for their annihilating is not good or effective. The odor from the disinfectant is almost as bad as the existence of the insectiferous things.

Embalmed Eggs Served.

"During the three months of my incarceration not a drop of milk was served the prisoners. The eggs are embalmed, as evidenced by the fact that the yolk is oral to the shell, caused by their lying in one position for so long that the original egg condition has been overcome. They serve an ounce of tallow butter to the men to take a week. There has been perceptible improvement in the discipline in the Middlesex County House of Correction since the appointment by the public press of the advanced humanitarian treatment advocated by your excellency. But there is plenty of room for further improvement.

"A certain officer is regarded by the inmates as the hardest man on the official force of the institution and I have frequently heard mutterings in the way of threats as to what they would do to him if the caught him out at any time; this man gets more prisoners into trouble than all the other officers put together. He seems to delight in reporting an unfortunate. He parades around in his sneakers in the most secretive manner possible. This fellow is not content with doing his smelling work inside the prison, but he has made visits to the wealthy dwellings on the outside by having his walking shoes soled and heeled with rubber.

"It is asserted that packages of fruit are often tampered with after delivery at the institution. One of the officers last summer had an ice box made for use on his power boat; he also had a number of iron bolts made in the blacksmith shop for the float. I understand that he declared that he could not have purchased on the outside such a chest for less than $8, whereas all that it cost him was less than a dollar for the materials.

"It is boldly declared by men who are in a position to know that quantities of paint have been removed from the prison by officers for their own private use, that articles of furniture are made and taken from the institution on the instalment plan; that in the tailor and shoe-making shops clothing is made, repaired, pressed, etc., not only for the officers, but for their wives and families, and that the best grades of leather are used for such purposes.

"I would suggest to Your Excellency that every prisoner brought to jail should be examined. If he or she shows signs of disease, commit them to a hospital to be provided for such cases, and keep them there until, by the new treatment, there is no possibility of spreading the infection.

"Asking your immediate attention to this matter, I beg to remain,

"Your humble servant,

"In furtherance of the noble good,"

"(Rev.) EBEN E. BAYLISS."

Lynn Woman Fatally Burned.

Mrs. Annie O'Connell, sixty-five, of No. 25 Rockaway street, Lynn, received fatal burns last night when she overturned an oil lamp in her home. She extinguished the flames but not until she had been badly burned about the face and body. She was taken to the Lynn Hospital, where it was said she would die.

GABY DESLYS, WHO PREFERS STAGE TO A CROWN

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Gaby Deslys was Madame Sunk.

"Gaby of the Lilies," she wants the American people to call her.

But please forget that!

Gaby will rest a few days and then, with her own company, will appear in "Les Debuts De Chichine" at the Winter Garden.

"We are bound strictly," said her agent, "to say nothing regarding late assignations with a King. She wouldn't allow us to advertise her as being anything other than an artist."

MAYOR LOSES FOOT RACE.

But Malden Chief Gets Boy's Cap in a Handicap.

All Malden is talking of the new record established by Mayor George Howard Fall in a half-mile run yesterday afternoon through the principal streets of that city.

It was in his favorite grape vine that he found three youngsters busy hauling up. He started. They started. The race was on. They had a good handicap and the Mayor crossed the tape at scratch. The distance between the handicap men and the scratch men grew narrower and narrower. Through several of the main thoroughfares of the city they dashed.

At Summer street the Mayor was ready to pass them. Then something happened. One of the handicap men dropped his cap. The Mayor stopped to pick it up, but as the youngster failed to return it Mayor Fall is keeping it as a trophy of the chase.

SUYDAM VAINLY BEGS HIS WIFE TO RETURN

Young Woman and Plumber's Son Are Ordered Out of New York Flat.

"I do not consider myself immoral. I am simply unconventional.

"I am not a soulmate, or an affinity. I abhor such long-eared lackasses.

"I left my husband and came to Fred Noble simply because I like Fred better than I do Walter. If my sentiment shifts, I may go back to my husband.

"I took this step with the full consent of my husband, his father and also of my own mother."

Mrs. Walter Lispenard Suydam, Jr.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The strange case of Mrs. Walter L. Suydam, Jr., who eloped with Fred Noble, son of a plumber, developed several remarkable new phases to-day, in which the great affection of young Suydam for his frankly unconventional wife furnished the sympathetic note.

First the manager of the Regina apartment house discovered the identity of the young man and woman and expressed an urgent invitation that they vacate. Young Noble, laughed and Mrs. Suydam filled her lungs to the air and gave him a disdainful snub.

"I don't know what Fred Noble is going to do," she said to-night, "but I am going to remain in this apartment until spring."

"What am I going to do?" asked Noble. "I am practically all done now. I'm going to move."

So there the matter of a quiet for the retreat fugitive pair rested for the night.

Young Suydam returned to his home at Hingepoint, to-day after having made an almost tearful prayer to the images of his cold blue eyes, white face, auricle of light hair and red lips that break constantly into a smile, whom he had called wife for eight years.

She calmly told him that he never could understand and bade him good-bye.

Suydam Sees Wife.

She almost convinced him she was right and he was wrong and practically at her suggestion he put his affairs in the hands of the family lawyer.

Unless Young Suydam weakens from his determination papers in a suit against his wife probably will be filed at Riverhead on Monday morning.

"Yes, I paid a visit to my wife in New York to-night," said Walter Suydam at his home to-night. "I am not sure that I should have made the trip because then had been an understanding between Louise and myself that I should not seek to find her whereabouts.

"We employed detectives to locate her but only because I wished to know that she was safe. Then I went to New York to see her, although at the family confidence there, when her father and mother and mine were present, she told me that she loved Fred Noble very much.

"Louise told me that I had been more than kind and considerate, but that Fred Noble has come into her life and that she did not care to live with me any longer. I promised that I would take the matter philosophically and not worry, but that is impossible, for I did worry.

"I found Louise alone, and pleaded with her to return home. I put the matter before her plainly, and we went over the matter carefully. She was sitting in an easy chair, half reclining, and did not seem surprised at my visit. She also greeted me as though I was returning home from a day's fishing trip, but at the same time I knew I must hold my peace for I am afraid I was a little nervous, but she must have understood.

"I told her it was time to end the farce, that she might allow me to protect her and that her as a husband should.

"I assured her my father and mother would forgive and forget as well as myself, that she would be doubly welcomed home. She said good bye and had come back again. But she never yielded, and finally, after I had made my prayer, said good bye, and I told her good bye.

"It seemed to be her desire. I consulted our lawyer, Joseph T. Loosse of Riverhead, and the legal end of the case is in his hand.

Came to Understanding.

"I don't know whether she is coming back. I don't know—I don't know"—and a sob choked his voice. He turned away and would talk no more.

Mrs. Suydam was found by a reporter in her little apartment.

When the reporter entered the narrow hallway of the little flat, he came face to face with Noble, who was engaging in a spirited telephone conversation.

"He will be in a moment," sang out Noble with perfect self possession. "Step right into the front room."

In a Morris chair by the window of the sitting room and parlor sat a tall woman, wearing a white shirtwaist with short sleeves and "V" shaped at the throat, and a black skirt. Her jet black hair was worn in a knot. Her features were regular and strong, and were surmounted by a pair of piercing eyes.

"Mr. Noble will be down up and said: "Won't you sit down?

"My people know exactly what I was going to do and they know exactly what I am going to do now. When I say my people I mean my husband, his father and my father and mother.

MOTOR BOAT JUMPS OUT INTO A CROWD

Three Injured, One Dying, From Extraordinary Accident in Niagara Race.

BUFFALO, Sept. 16.—Dashing at forty miles an hour in a race for the championship of the Great Lakes, the speed boat Dixie IV, owned by Frederick Burnham of New York, steered from its course, mounted the crowded beach wall that separates the river from the canal, and injured three persons, one of them fatally.

Before the mist kicked up by the boat had cleared the Dixie IV was high and dry, and the victims lay groaning on the ragged rocks.

In the boat with Burnham were Paul Gaudet, Charles Nanier and John Davidson of New York, and Vern Keaton of Jamaica, West Indies. All escaped by jumping into the river.

The injured are:

Mrs. Elmer Bell, mother of Harold, forty-three; scalp wound and laceration over right eye.

Alden Daniels, sixteen years old; right leg cut.

The Dixie IV, was leading by two miles and a half. The accident was due to a defective steering gear.

MAYOR FITZGERALD'S BROTHER STRICKEN

Collapses as He Is About to Order Lunch, and Is Hurried to Hospital.

George E. Fitzgerald, brother of Mayor Fitzgerald, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage in Thompson's spa, yesterday afternoon, and is now at the City Hospital. It is said by the physicians in attendance that his chances for recovery are good.

The family of the stricken man were notified and came to the hospital at once, the Mayor being the first to reach him. When Mr. Fitzgerald was first taken ill he was removed to the Relief Hospital in a taxi. It was thought by the physicians there that he could receive better care at the City Hospital and his removal there was sanctioned by the Mayor, who remained at his brother's bedside all evening.

Mrs. George Fitzgerald and her son were at their summer home at Bayside. They were notified by telephone and hurried to the hospital. Late last night he was able to converse with his family.

Mayor Fitzgerald is scheduled to leave Boston to-day for Chicago, where he is to address the International Municipal League. He will not cancel his trip, as he was thought likely at first, unless there is a change for the worse in the condition of his brother.

When Mr. Fitzgerald collapsed, he was preparing to order lunch at the Spa. He was about to sit at the table, when he exclaimed, "I don't feel just right," and immediately collapsed. Representative McCarthy of Ward 16, who was with Mr. Fitzgerald, when he was taken ill, ordered a taxi and broke all speed records to the Relief Hospital.

Three physicians were called by the Mayor as soon as he arrived. It was thought at first that Mr. Fitzgerald was suffering from acute indigestion, but a diagnosis by the physicians disclosed the fact that it was more serious.

O'CONNELL SCORES MANNING

Challenges Clerk of Court to Meet Him in Debate.

Open air rallies for James E. O'Connell, candidate for the Democratic nomination for clerk of the Superior Criminal Court, were held last night at Sullivan square, Oak square, Barry's Corner and at the Allston circles. O'Connell charged that Manning did not support John B. Moran for reelection, that he antagonized District Attorney Pelletier and that he has wasted the money of his office.

He also charged that the present incumbent had devoted much of his time to lobbying at the State House and stated that Manning employed clerks where a less number could do the work. The superfluous employes here stated were relatives.

O'Connell defied Manning to answer these charges and challenged him to meet him on the public platform and debate the administration.

CANDIDATES ARE CHEERFUL

Managers of Republican Leaders Give Out Statements.

Optimism exists in the camps of the three candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor if the statements of the managers issued yesterday are reliable. Walker will win in a walk, says Julian R. Dillaby, campaign manager for the Speaker. Frothingham has the call ahead of them all, says Charlie Baxter. There is absolutely nothing to it, but White, say the Brookline man's managers.

"It's going to be a busy week, Norman White is moving around fast in his high powered benzine buggy. Frothingham has over 100 speaking engagements for the next six days and Speaker Walker's program calls for activity beginning at 8 a. m. to-morrow morning.

And at the Democratic State Committee headquarters Executive Secretary O'Leary says Foss will be re-elected by over 50,000, and there you are.

THREE WALSH RALLIES.

Candidate for House Urge Men of Courage for Office.

John J. Walsh, one of the eight candidates for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in Ward 1, East Boston, spoke last night in Central square, Day square and at Orient Heights.

"It is necessary for you to send real men to the Legislature," he declared. "They must be men of intelligence, courage, vigilance and power. They must be men like Cavanaugh, Walker, Walsh, Meaney, Washburn, Montague, Underhill, Lesnger, Reidy and McGinley.

"East Boston has been defeated time and again in all its aspirations because of the incompetency and neglect of its men in the Legislature. They have promised much and done little."

Falls in Shaft, Skull Broken

Thomas Mellor of No. 254 Main street, Charlestown, was placing a rope and tackle preparatory for the hoisting of a piano, on Russell street in Charlestown, when the pulley gave away, dropping him to the bottom of the air shaft, at the top of which the rigging was being placed. Mellor sustained a fractured skull and is on the dangerous list at the Relief Hospital.

College Romance Is Ended Girl Bride Wins Freedom

MR. AND MRS. PAUL I. KEELER AND THEIR SON.

Exeter Young Woman Tells How She Was Deserted After Husband Went to Yale.

HAVERHILL, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Grace L. Keeler of this city has been granted a divorce at Lawrence from Paul I. Keeler, now of Pittsburg, with whom she eloped five years ago when she was a nineteen-year old girl at Exeter, N. H., and Keeler had just completed his senior year at Phillips Exeter Academy.

"My romance is all over. It is ended," said Mrs. Keeler to-night at the home of her parents on Ford street. "I am glad of it. I have endured this separation for four years. I have hesitated about going to the courts, but now I am glad I did."

The decree gives Mrs. Keeler the custody of her four-year-old boy. She will work now, as she has been doing, to support herself and the child. Keeler made no contest. No alimony was sought. Mrs. Keeler gave to-night this account of her brief wedded happiness:

"I was a girl in Exeter, N. H., when I met Paul I. Keeler. He is the son of Asa S. Keeler an attorney of Doylestown, Pa. His father is not a rich man, though it has been said he is.

"On June 25, 1906, when Paul had finished his final year at Phillips Exeter we eloped to Cambridge, where we were married by the Rev. E. H. Cantwell of the Cambridge Free Baptist Church. We lived in Cambridge that Summer. Paul got work in the baggage room at the South Station, Boston. We were very happy. Paul made great plans for our future. I notified my parents right after the wedding, but Paul did not tell his people till the next Fall.

"In September, 1906, Paul entered Sheffield Scientific School at Yale. He was there three years, studying mechanical engineering. I went back to my parents' home in Exeter. Paul came up from Yale to see me. In November, 1907, two persons and I moved to Haverhill. My baby was born that month. Paul came here then and stayed two weeks. He was very attentive. He gave me $15 while he was here. He went back to Yale, never have seen him since. He did write me, but I have not heard from him for over a year. Not having seen my husband for nearly four years, I have gotten a divorce."

RALLIES FOR MANNING.

Ex-Representative Fay Gets After James O'Connell Hard.

Open air rallies in the interest of John F. Manning, candidate for re-election as clerk of the Superior Criminal Court, were held last night in Wards 22 and 23.

Ex-Representative Thomas J. Fay attacked James E. O'Connell as a lawyer who had tried to try a case before the Superior Criminal Court and as an aspirant politician who had been absolutely of no service to the party which would entitle him to consideration for the high office sought.

"Every member of the O'Connell family has sought public office, either elective or appointive, within the past two years," said Fay. They have the office-seeking habit cultivated to such an extent that they feel the ballot would not appear proper without the name of some member of the family upon it."

Fay charged that the manager of O'Connell's campaign although a ward leader one year ago had refused absolutely to lend his services for the election of Governor Foss unless he was given $2,500 for less than a month's work.

Rallies for Manning will be held in all parts of the county for the final week of the campaign. Congressmen Curley and Murray will take the stump and a corps of other speakers will assist.

EVERETT CEMETERY CHAPEL DEDICATED

Dedicatory exercises were held yesterday afternoon in the new Woodlawn Cemetery chapel, Everett, erected at a cost of about $35,000. Among those who took part were the Revs. George G. Hamilton, D. D., of Everett; Charles H. Moss, D. D., of Malden; E. Perry Bush, D. D., of Chelsea; Harley D. Maxwell, D. D., of Somerville; O. E. Maile, D. D., of Somerville, and Rev. Dr. Charles Leeds of Chelsea.

Ten trustees of the cemetery were present, giving the chapel, formally to the citizens of Everett. They are Mayor Frederick A. Dolbeer and others by Howard Phipps, Jr., Alexander Bliss, Thomas Mills, Miss Mary Eliot, Frank Bliss, Miss S. S. Sturgis, Frederick Kimball and Mrs. Fitzgerald Bancroft.

CLARKSON TOURS DISTRICT.

Candidate for Senate in the Seventh Raps Curley.

Robert P. Clarkson, Democratic candidate for the Senate in the Seventh district, standing in the tonneau of an automobile last night, talked to Dorchester voters in the interests of his candidacy. Clarkson is one of five senatorial aspirants in his district. He assailed Senator Thomas F. Curley, saying that Curley's record did not agree with the pre-election pledges. Clarkson declared himself in favor of a movement to limit campaign funds in the future to a certain figure. Clarkson's tour over the district last night started Columbia road in Ward 15 and ended at Fields Corner Square.

EVERETT SCOUTS WIN CROSS COUNTRY RUN

Combined Team of Concord and Malden Youngsters Lose Close Contest.

With an elapsed time of 2 hours 52½ minutes, the Everett Boy Scouts won the cross country Marathon run from Concord Junction to Everett yesterday afternoon, defeating a team composed of members of the Concord and Maplewood (Malden) Boy Scouts. The course was twenty miles, each runner covering one mile.

The runners were carried over the route in automobiles, distributed a mile apart, and as fast as a runner completed the lap he was picked up by another automobile and carried along to the end of the race.

The start was made from the Concord Junction postoffice, Francis McLean of Everett and George Lodge of Concord each being handed a letter addressed to Superintendent Manhood of the Everett postoffice. These letters were passed along from runner to runner and Reginald Sawyer of Everett was first to deliver his letter at the Everett postoffice, at just 12:45 o'clock, Captain Harold Woodman of Maplewood, the last runner for the Concord-Maplewood team, delivering his letter at 1:23 o'clock.

Concord-Maplewood runners took the lead, and when Arlington Heights was reached their runner was leading by three quarters of a mile. Everett steadily gained and caught up with the opposing runner on the Mystic lake boulevard, and Sawyer of Everett was but a few minutes behind Woodman when the latter reached the Everett city line and turned over the letter to Ralph Sawyer six minutes. Robert Jones and Albert Sawyer of Everett and John French six minutes. Richard Wilbur, Everett, a resident of the Concord-Maplewood team. Troop prizes for getting over the hard course in first were Lean and Harrison Evans.

President Ernest Nelson of the New England Boy Scouts was in charge of the affair, and was assisted by John H. Stone of Everett, a former Harvard star, as chief of events.

POLITICAL NEWS

Lest there be any misunderstanding it is announced that Representative Thomas J. Casey of Ward 14 is a candidate for a Democratic renomination to the House. In some way Casey's name was left off the official list of candidates as given out by the Boston Board of Election Commissioners. Casey is a candidate and alive one, and his fifty-two-foot sign displayed on Broadway and Emerson street is the largest political banner yet flung to the breeze.

Representative Theodore L. Sorenson of Ward 1 has a slight advantage over the average politician now in the public eye as well as state. Sorenson runs a moving picture business and some of the stars of the pictures and he is ready at all times to accommodate in a quiet way at political meetings and gatherings. He is a candidate for a Democratic renomination from Ward 1.

Leader Jim Donovan and his political organization in Ward 14 are working hard to put Representative Daniel J. Connolly on the political map. Representatives Joe Leonard and Jimmy Gordon are the other Democratic candidates for the House nominations to the House but Connolly is making a bed hot campaign to succeed again.

In Ward 12 Representative George T. Dyer is doing his utmost to eliminate Leader Dyke as a political factor. Dyke, who is seeking a renomination for the House is the leader of an anti-Doyle ward committee ticket, and Dyer is making a strong effort to make it a double victory on September 26. Senator Joseph Walsh is the bulk of his political effort to putting his colleague on the branch of the Legislature as his successor.

Out in Ward 20 the campaign of Joe Cohan, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Representative is not exciting much interest. Cohan has passed through a thoroughly physical fitness in no more than one ordinary mortal and if he is not defeated for the nomination by his many enemies as he has been in routing the forces of sound health he should top the ticket on September 26. He was formerly secretary of the Corn Exchange and one of Tom Lawson's confidential secretaries.

Daniel T. Calahan, the former secret service agent of the government is a candidate for political honors in Charlestown. He is running on the Republican ticket in a strong Democratic district. Calahan, however, numbers his Democratic friends by the hundreds.

GLIDDEN PARTY OFF ON LAST OF TOUR

Flanders "20" Pathfinders Start To-day on the Run to Jacksonville.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 16.—The Flanders "20" Pathfinders, for the 1911 Glidden tour, with American Automobile Association pilot A. L. Westgard in charge, will leave Atlanta to-morrow morning on the final stage of its trip from New York to Jacksonville. No running schedule has been announced, as the tour lies through territory strange to Mr. Westgard. In all probability, however, three days will be assigned to the remainder of the route, which will make the Glidden a twelve-day event, including one day of rest which will probably be spent at Atlanta.

The next approach of the date of the tour and the consequent necessity for haste in the preparation of the trip maps which will guide the tourists have been responsible for what has proven by all odds the most rapid pathfinding in Glidden history. Though traveling four eight or nine hours a day, the Flanders "20" Pathfinder has not only laid out its entire trip from Jacksonville to Atlanta but has also passed for the necessities of road mapping and photography as well as allowing an hour or two every day for receptions and mass meetings along the route.

First Woman Makes Trip.

One week and an hour were consumed on the entire trip from New York to Atlanta, over which the newspaper tour of 1909 was run in ten strenuous days. In addition, the pathfinding carried Mrs. Westgard, the first woman who has made the trip south of this city. The Flanders Route has endeavored throughout to make the journey comfortable. Mrs. Westgard says she has enjoyed every foot of the trip and regrets the near approach of its termination.

Hillside enthusiasm in the South is very high.

Receptions have been given the Flanders "20" and her crew at nearly every city of importance. A big demonstration welcomed the car to Atlanta, and to-night a local paper prints a list of personal entries which includes no less than forty cars owned in the South.

In general, the highways over which the tour will make its trip to this city from New York strike Pilot Westgard very favorably.

On some days' running, in all probability, the scheduled speed of the car will be the maximum allowed by the State laws, he believes.

Everything Runs Smoothly.

"If we get rain for the tour when it traverses the Virginia Mountains," said he, "the trip must be run in entirely different conditions from those in vogue when the road is dry. When the tour was started here away over the Blue Ridge, it was in wretched shape, heavy with mud and in no rough way to be pronounced dangerous. I confess that I was amazed one day that our car landed on the steep, slippery grades, even without chains on the tires.

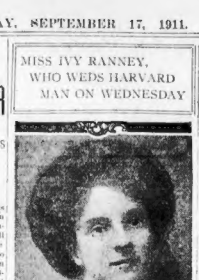
"We have not had a particle of trouble to-day with the car which is the leader or the consort Flanders '20' that is carrying the baggage. That is the best way in which the cars have done their work. They have proved record-breaking feat possible up to this time."

DROP IN REGISTRATION.

Lists Show Falling Off of 2,991 for Primaries.

Registration in Boston for the primary election on September 26 closed last night with a total registration of 101,630 names, according to official words on file at this office. This is 2,991 less than were on the voting list at the primary election last fall. The decrease contains in the Democratic party is said to be the reason of the falling off this year. The election commissioners will begin tomorrow the registration of voters for the state election.

MISS IVY RANNEY, WHO WEDS HARVARD MAN ON WEDNESDAY



MISS IVY M RANNEY

600 TONS OF COAL IN RIVER.

Boston Company Loses by Collapse of Wharf at Kittery.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 16.—The wharf and coal pocket at Kittery Point, owned by J. C. Cutts, collapsed to-night and the buildings with over 600 tons of coal went into the river in forty-eight feet of water. Part of the coal was owned by the Eastern Dredging Company of Boston. The loss to Mr. Cutts is $4,000.

HUNTING ROMANCE LEADS TO WEDDING

Clarence Hauthaway to Marry Ivy Marguerite Ranney Next Wednesday.

Miss Ivy Marguerite Ranney, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Ranney and the late Darwin E. Ranney of Cambridge, will become the bride of Clarence Little Hauthaway of Brookline, Harvard '10, on next Wednesday evening. More than 1,000 invitations have been issued.

The romance began when they met during Mr. Hauthaway's college days in Cambridge. Mr. Hauthaway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Hauthaway of Brookline. In college athletics he was a "high gun" of the Harvard Scientific club. He is skilled in hunting and fishing. Under his fullness Miss Ranney has acquired no experience doing those athletic feats far in advance of the average girl.

The wedding will take place in the First Baptist Church of Boston, Commonwealth avenue and Clarendon street, at 7:30 in the evening. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Francis E. Ingram, former pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. DeBlois.

The bride will be escorted up the aisle by her mother's cousin, Major Joseph W. Parker of Newton Center. She will be given in marriage by her father.

The ushers will be attended by Mrs. Julia Hauthaway, formerly Miss Florence Ranney of Cambridge, as matron of honor, and by four bridesmaids. They are Miss Ethel Brattleboro, Vt., Miss Evelyn Martin of Sharon, Miss Helen Hicks of Cambridge and Miss Marjorie Hathaway, sister of the groom.

The best man will be R. Maynard Hitchcock of Newark, N. J., a classmate of Mr. Hauthaway. The ushers, all Harvard men, will be Harold Greenough Brooks, Herbert Rogers of Dedham, Robert Hall of Madison and Henry Mabbott of Plymouth.

Following the wedding there will be a reception at Riverbank Court, Cambridge. At both wedding and reception a delicacy and novel feature will be music on the harp, as Miss Florence DeSeguin will perform. After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Hauthaway will live at No. 84 Corey road, Brookline.

LOOK

DOES NOT LOOK LIKE A BROOM, THOUGH IT DOES THE WORK A BROOM CANNOT DO

Why pay $100 for a Vacuum Cleaner when you can get a Good one for $8.50?

Not Sold in Stores

Over 60,000 Sent to Families

A DREAM Standing erect, in fresh clean clothes, holding handles loosely, moving arms naturally, moving relaxed, without necessary exertion. Nozzle gliding over the surface, carpets growing brighter and looking newer. Dust and dirt, germs disappearing into the Cleaner. A happy smile comes over her face. It is a dream of sunshine in her life. HER DREAM HAS COME TRUE.

ORNAMENTAL — The Home Vacuum Cleaner is an ornament in any home. Light, easily carried. Weight 9 pounds. Is always ready for use. Made for the home at a home price. Practical invention. Not an experiment.

EVERY WOMAN NEEDS IT

SWEEPING SCATTERS DUST—DRAGS DIRT

Let the Cleaner get it. "Carpet looked NEW AND BRIGHT after cleaning; removed dirt and fine dust no broom or sweeper will ever remove." Lawson C. Crease, Ga. "It is marvelous how it takes dust out of carpets recently swept." J. E. Pearsall, Calif.

SANITARY "House smells much sweeter; no dust to fly around room." Mrs. David Bricker, Pa. "Cleaned our bed room after my wife had swept it; took up almost a teacup of dust." J. H. Lloyd, Ind. "Had one pint of dust; enough to kill a small army if inhaled." W. W. Brown, N. Y.

AIR RUSHES INTO CLEANER carrying dust and dirt could not remove. Don't injure carpets—clean them on the floor. Never used a broom on my carpets since receiving the Cleaner; I will have no more taking up of rugs and carpets." Miss Lulu Reinsch, Kans. "I bowed four carpets on my floor myself much better than we could by taking them up." Mrs. Sallie Vinegar, O.

DELIGHTED "My wife says I did a wise thing in buying her the Home Vacuum Cleaner." Fred Saker, Vt. "It is worth its weight in gold to the woman who does her own work." Emily F. Smith, Kans. "The ladies in the house are all tickled to death with its efficiency." W. L. Murray, Ore.

WHO DOES THE SWEEPING? How nice not to have the dust settling on the hair, lips, in your nostrils—still worse, tasting and breathing it; nor settling on lace curtains, hangings, furniture and ornaments. "So good we could not do without it after sweeping." Mrs. A. Bucklin, Mass. "Dust came out of the carpet like magic; I did not have to breathe any of it." Miss Isobelle Beaton, O.

DELICATE WOMEN "My physician said I could not do any more hard work; in sheer desperation I got one of your Cleaners; I have been doing all my work ever since; your Cleaner is a God-send to delicate women." Mrs. Jos. J. Kennedy, O. "I have sold these Cleaners to women who could not use a broom and found they were able to use them; some have done away with their sweeping woman." Bertha Strauss, O. "I am not very strong; am pleased; can use it without fatigue." Mrs. E. C. Hill, Vt. "Surprised at the ease with which it does the work." Edwin Franks, Calif. So they go—thousands of enthusiastic letters from rich and poor—city, village and country; claiming it saves carpets, curtains, time, labor, health and money. Costs nothing to operate; ready to use when received. PUT IT IN YOUR HOME—it is a necessity. Over 60,000 in families, going into homes everywhere. No home complete without it; even at a sacrifice have it; you will get it any way. Now is your chance.

How To Get It

GREAT FACTORY SALE

Not sold in stores. Shipped direct from our factory. For a short time we will send our Home Vacuum Cleaner and include (without charge) our NEW ATTACHMENT for cleaning finished floors and linoleums, on receipt of $8.50.

DELIVERED AT YOUR HOME

LAID DOWN AT YOUR DOOR by the Express Company. Charges Prepaid, to any part of the United States. Mention this Great Factory Sale in your order, as this advertisement will not appear again. You won't be disappointed. You can't make a mistake. It's a bargain. Make yourself a friend. Order NOW, then shake hands with yourself. Write us anyway.

AGENTS Go into any home—sprinkle a little fine chalk or dirt on the carpet—take it up like magic; let the lady try it; she will keep it. Your sale is made; you go on to the next; demonstrate in five minutes and sell again; then the next. Sell 3 out of 10. Agents are making $30 to $100 per week—some $200 per week; a woman made $1500 selling cleaners.

JOIN THE MONEY MAKERS F. A. White, Ill., writes: "Sold 13 in 4 hours." C. E. Goff, Mo.: "Sold 5 Saturday; my first attempt." Geo. A. Smith, O.: "Wasout one evening, sold 6." E. T. Evans, Ill., ordered 103. F. E. Poole, Mass., ordered 1, then 6, then 12, then 25, ordered 150 since. Mrs. F. E. Fess, a Minnesota lady, ordered 50, then 30, 282 since. F. S. Hoppes, La., ordered 30 and says "More orders coming." So they go—rich or poor—city, village or country. Easily carried. Be a money maker. Be a success. Don't let some one else beat you to it. Send postal for agent's selling plan. Act promptly. It is important. Address

WALTHAM HIGH WINS FIRST BATTLE, 17-0

High School Elevens Busy in Preparation For Greatest Season

Suburban Squads Beat the Gun and Get Good Start. But Boston's Leading Teams Will All Be Out for Hard Practice To-morrow

By OTTO B. HANSON.

The interscholastic football season is on. Waltham High and New Bedford opened the 1911 campaign on the gridiron yesterday afternoon before a great crowd on the new Waltham High field, and now interest will be keen till the final whistles sound on November 30. These two schools are the only ones that have advanced so far, but the "candidates report" sign has been flying in all of the schools and it will not be long before a big list of games will be played each week.

Football is the king of schoolboy sports, both to the players and spectators, and this season should be the best ever. Last year was successful, but it was a couple of weeks before the season "got going." The new rules were instituted and it took some time before the players and the spectators got the fine points. This season the new rules are quite familiar.

The Boston high schools open a few days later than those in the suburban towns and are a little later in getting out the football candidates, but to-morrow all the schools will have men out and the playgrounds will be scenes of great activity. The suburban schools have been at work during the past week, led by Waltham High.

The titles in the four high school leagues—Interscholastic, Preparatory, Suburban and Boston—will again be fought for strenuously. Last season it rule was the title in the Interscholastic, Malden in the Suburban, Brookline the Preparatory, and Mechanic Arts the championship of the Boston League.

As this season promises to be the best gridiron year the high schools have ever experienced, interest is already running high. The interclty game to be played between Malden High and the Central High School of Philadelphia has aroused lots of enthusiasm and the games played by Malden High will be keenly watched.

To-morrow afternoon the candidates for the teams of the different Boston high schools will be out in force. Mechanic Arts will turn out on the Columbus Avenue grounds and Captain Burnell expects a large squad. Russell, Gleason, Mooney, Power and Kenney are the veterans, and many promising candidates have signified their intention of trying for the team. Boston Latin and the High School of Commerce will also be out for practice this week. A call for candidates has been sent out in East High, but they will turn out in full force to-morrow. Higgins, who was chosen captain, is a fullback and three other veteran to pick a berth from.

It is expected that sixty candidates will report at Brookline High. The school has a lot of good material and a strong team should be developed. The captain would be selected from the squad, but Quilty and Fuller, last season's backfield men, will be candidates. Ames and Melnaggie and Milliam, tackles last year, will be out for the team, as will Ames Brace and Allen, both veterans, are booked for the end berths. Nine games have been scheduled for the season, opening on September 30, with Medford High on its home grounds, and winding up with the annual games with the Mechanic Arts High school on November 30 on the Dorchester avenue grounds.

Forty Out at Brookline.

About forty candidates have been out for light practice at Brookline High, and prospects for another good team are very bright. Coach Carroll will retain a with the team, and has several seasoned men to work with. Captain Redding will again play guard, Walther Fulbert, Thatcher halfback, Mahan quarter, Fairbrother center, and Newton guard. The team will be a member of the Interscholastic League and will play its two league games with Newton High and Cambridge Latin on November 11 and 17.

George Connell, captain of the South Boston eleven, will have his candidates out for their drill to-morrow afternoon. Only two members of last season's team are back at school, and Coach Redding will again have hard times developing good material. This school will open its season with Burdett College on the Commerce field on October 4.

Prospects are very bright at Cambridge Latin. Last season's eleven was a winning team in the Suburban League and Captain Lally has high hopes of having a team that will do better showing than last season, when it won seven games and lost four out of the eleven games played. Kimber and Thomas will be the ends, Lally and Parkhurst the tackles, Cullen and Hall the guards, Captain Finnegan at center, Lally at quarter and Johnny Ives may make a pigskin heath for himself at quarterback. The manager has arranged a full schedule of games and is negotiating with Quincy High for a game on September 30 and Medford High for a game with Waltham High on November 30, at the Walch City. The eleven will be a member of the Interscholastic League again this year and will play Brookline High on November 17 and New Ton High on the 24th. The annual game with Mudge will be played on October 30.

Are the men that reported when candidates were called.

Malden Expects Strong Team.

Nearly seventy candidates for the Malden High team reported to Coach Charles Cuddy and he expects to develop a team of last season's standard. The loss of H. Bendix, Anderson and Vesscott of last year's squad was sorely felt and their places will be hard to fill. Romeo Benoit is also returning at quarter last season, to out and should be a great general.

Interest in the Malden High players is at a high pitch. They were conceded the championship of the State last year, with a team that won thirteen games and was not defeated or tied and they won the right to play teams for bigger honors. Negotiations were opened last season with the Central High School of Philadelphia for a game, but it proved to be too late in the year, and a game was arranged for the latter part of this season. This interclty game will be the big noise in school football this season and a regular coaching crowd will already turn out.

The football players at Bedford High are talking about winning the Suburban League this this Fall. Nearly all the players of last season's team are back at school. Captain Brawley is confident they will develop into a team capable of winning that title.

At Melrose, Coach Lawrence Riley has had a good start for fall work. Several veterans are on hand and lots of new material. Last season Riley took a team of green men in cow and rounds out a fairly strong team, and the suburban schools will watch his work this year.

Somerville High has fared much better than its followers dared hope. Doane, the sturdy fullback of last season's team, has returned and will be on the job help. There are at least six seasoned players back at school and it is hopeful that one or two will whatever to play this season. Bob Caldwell is on hand and will again play in the back field. William Parks is out for another season at quarterback. Jack Hardie, the big guard, is back at school. Jack Hardie and Caldwell are two players who add to the annual game with Bridge last season, are back and will be strong candidates for the eleven.

Somerville Opens at Home.

Somerville will open its season on October 7 with the Cambridge Latin School on the new Somerville athletic field. The game will not dedicate the field, however, but the big time will be on Columbus Day, with Bridgeton High School as the attraction. Four Suburban League games will be played in September, two away from home, and the annual game with Bridge will be played for November 30 at somerville.

Sally Sherlock will again coach the candidates at Arlington. The boys will go out for the first practice to-morrow afternoon, and all hands are confident that another championship team can be developed.

Wealth of Good "Subs" Brightens Carlisle Outlook

CARLISLE, Pa., Sept. 16.—Lack of material, from present indications, is not likely to all the Carlisle Indian football eleven this season. In fact, Coach Warner, who has been frequently handicapped by having a first string of football men so far in advance of a second string that the latter had little show for substitution except as a last resort, and who frequently had to show his men to go into games backed up by demoralizingly weak substitutes, has now at his disposal a lot of candidates who show splendid aptitude for the gridiron pastime.

Few of the new arrivals have had experience, but what they lack here is made up in either determination to make first team position. Especially promising is the running ability of Latta and Robinson, from Minnesota, and Pratt and Martell, from Dartmouth. At the close of the initial week of the season's practice Warner increased the pace of his practice and the past six days have been given over to hard work on the kicking and running order punts and in the open field.

Although the coming season opens for Carlisle here on September 28, with a game against Lebanon Valley, the stress of the work is being placed on the Georgetown game at Washington D. C., October 14, and Warner knows that the unusually hard schedule will demand every bit of material he can develop. He will, therefore, pay special attention to his first reserves.

The arrival of Thorpe to compete his second season of varsity gives Carlisle a first-class kicker and punter. This will be a big improvement over last years conditions in this department. Old men who are latemembers include Captain Byrd, Guiter; Wheelock Arcasa, Jordan, Powell and Lone Star. New material of value seems to include Dyke, Hauser, Indermark, Hodge, Large, Beagle, Webb and H. Wheelock.

LIGHT SLATE FOR ARMY.

Yale and Navy Games Only Big Ones on Schedule.

WEST POINT, Sept. 16.—The West Point schedule of football games this year is the lightest the Cadets have attempted for some time. Of the eight games listed, two are Navy and the only two of importance on the Army schedule. The soldiers were disappointed to not securing their annual game with Harvard, and owing to the influence of Harvard's decision not to play the West Point team this year, they were unable to fill the date with a game. Coach Sutphen of Dartmouth had both teams and their schedules in mind when Georgetown will make its initial appearance on the West Point gridiron on November 4 and the first game will be with Dartmouth on October 28. Nothing definite has been decided on as to the time and place for the Army-Navy game, but the Army would prefer to play the final game on November 25.

The West Point team has secured Lieut. Hartz, of the Third Cavalry, to coach the players for the season in place of James Tanzis, who has resigned. The schedule of games to be played on the West Point gridiron follows:

October 7, Vermont University; October 14, Rutgers; October 21, Yale; October 28, Lehigh; November 4, Georgetown; November 11, Bucknell; November 18, Colgate.

Opening Work of Yale Candidates Satisfies Coaches

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 16.—Yale's football squad has been rounded out to seventy members, practically the full number expected, and after nine days' light practice the coaches express themselves pleased with the outlook. The material is clearly strong [illegible] and there is no lack of [illegible] this year.

New ends, a centre and some new halfbacks must be developed. Brooks, resident coach for the ends, and captain Tom Shevlin and former Head Coach Howard Jones will begin after the development of the ends. Don Bomeisler and Walter Camp, Jr., who were crippled last year, and Gallmeyer, Harbison and Warren of the freshman team are the most promising in the ends.

Read and Hall, last year's Ketchel and Wolfe of the second squads freshmen backs, have the call at center. Read will [illegible] be assigned to the quarterback position.

There is a wealth of fast, heavy, but rather inexperienced backs, including Hazen, Phillips, Waters, Freeman, Reilly and Gaffins. Captain Foss of the freshmen last year may be used at halfback or may alternate with Captain Howe at quarterback. Howe is a [illegible] Foss will be shifted to fullback, as has been rumored.

Since the eleven reported three days ago, the work has been extremely rudimentary scrimmaging is not likely to be entered till after next week also. Yale will have only a few days of it before the opening game with Wesleyan on September 27.

Yale's lineup in the first game will probably be about as follows: Foss, fullback; Camp and Howe, halfbacks; Jones and Paul, guards; McDevitt and Childs, centre; Read, quarterback; Captain Howe, halfback; Phillips, Baker and Reily, fullback; Gaffins.

Yale's team will probably be lighter and faster than ever before this season and the forward pass and the punting game will be resorted to as a favorite play of for the Elis.

HAWTHORNE TO COACH

Will Take Charge of Eleven at Middleboro High.

MIDDLEBORO, Sept. 16.—The football prospects for Middleboro High are, thoroughly good for the coming season, and soon the eleven will be put under the coaching of W. A. Hawthorne, the athletic director. Only two of last year's team have left school and the material of the team is still available.

Manager Pemulman has arranged the following games: September 30, Fairhaven High at Fairhaven; October 7, Taunton Academy at Middleboro; October 21, Plymouth High at Middleboro; October 28, Fairhaven High at Middleboro; November 4, Taunton Academy at Marion; November 11, Plymouth High at Plymouth; November 30, Alumni at Middleboro.

There are several open dates that the local team would like to fill.

SERVICE

The Slogan of the Thomas Company. "Nothing Counts Like Service," is not a mere advertising phrase. It means that the factory, its branches and dealers pledge to Thomas owners the fullest measure of that technical service which clearly defined, means keeping the car that is in its entire life at the highest possible state of efficiency that care wear and tear of constant use will permit

CONFIDENCE

The success of the present Thomas organization rests upon the confidence of the public in its product, its methods and its business integrity. With a full realization of this fact the Boston Branch places itself squarely on record as an exponent in the broadest sense of "The Square Deal."

MARBLEHEAD "BEES" PHILANTHROPISTS

Of course it made "Looey" and it must have made others sore to notice the indignation of the Hon. Joe Walker and the supporters of the efforts of the Republican State Committee of Boston to sit in on the Indoor of the lieutenant-governorship.

Speaker Walker was put to shame here because he was not invited to a number of the Republican political gatherings at which Looey was the guest of honor.

If Mr. Speaker from Brookline is not satisfied with the headlines he secured from his protest and if he really feels that he is being unfairly treated by the powers that be of the City Committee headquarters, let him take a glance at the sworn returns from No. 6 Beacon street for the several years past. If he doesn't find that the State Committee has been a pretty fair friend of the City Committee, then his protest is warranted. However, to depart from the front of Joe Walker knows and Negus Wise must know that the Republican machine is wasting energies in Framingham. The night after last being male to come on it is not a festival. The machine is out in Framingham. Everybody knows it. It could do more effective work if no open.

How Mr. Stevens Gets By.

Elmer Stevens of Somerville is getting or rather not. More than one Republican has made a remark within the past month. The state treasurer has never had to make a fight such as he had to in the present off, because the steam roller was built in, and he has had a practically walkover. Joshing Devine for office which he has sought and which he is probably will appear when he opposed the re-election of Speaker Cushing. His opposition was supported for a time by Democratic leaders, but his support of Cushing soon changed that. Stevens is a member of the Republican state committee from Somerville, and is a member of the executive committee of the Republican city committee. He is a member of the Somerville Republican club, and is a member of the Somerville Republican club. He is a member of the Somerville Republican club. He is a member of the Somerville Republican club.

President Lowell of Harvard Defends College Morals

Pays Splendid Tribute to Present Day University Life

Many Reforms Initiated by Undergraduates Themselves

President A. Lawrence Lowell has come to the support of Harvard and other colleges in an exclusive article written for the Sunday AMERICAN, in which he takes issue with R. T. Crane of Chicago, whose strong arraignment of Harvard student dissipation was printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN. President Lowell says that Mr. Crane has exaggerated drunkenness and other forms of vice at Harvard and other colleges.

President Lowell's article follows:

September 14, 1911.

Editor of the Boston American.

Dear Sir:

You have asked me to comment on the statement by Mr. R. T. Crane, about drinking at Harvard, which appeared in your paper last Sunday, and I take pleasure in doing so.

Mr. Crane's charges are not made against Harvard in particular, and in fact the article stated that the conditions are much the same in other colleges.

It is against American student life in general that his indictment is laid.

Now it is true that there are students who are intemperate, and the college authorities are by no means blind to the gravity of the evil. Cases of drunkenness, and the vices that often follow in its train, are found among young men of all kinds, whether they go to college or not; and my own impression, based not upon statistics, but merely upon current observation, has always been that although these things attract more attention when done by students, they are on the whole less common in college than elsewhere.

Looking back over the history of a century, there can be no doubt that throughout the community drunkenness has diminished very much; but it is far from gone, and no one is fit to be responsible for the lives of young men who does not use against it every influence that can be effectively brought to bear.

That the figures given by Mr. Crane's informant are greatly exaggerated any one familiar with all sides of college life will recognize.

The estimate of the total abstainers at only 5 per cent. of the Seniors is clearly too small; to say that 35 per cent. drink heavily, and that 45 per cent. go on two or three bats a year, is far in excess of the truth; and it is still farther from the fact to say that 65 per cent. consort with bad women.

Those who have watched student life long are agreed that vice has lessened markedly within a generation—that 15 per cent., or about seventy men in a class at Harvard, become irretrievable drunkards hardly needs contradiction.

No doubt the informant's few personal instances are correct; no doubt his observations are accurate so far as he was in a position to make them; but he could not know that all the young men he saw at hotel bars were college students; and his figures for the whole undergraduate body are based upon guesses made for him by persons who could not have statistical knowledge.

It is the familiar case of studying the underside of human life, and forming an exaggerated idea of the proportion that the elements encountered bear to the whole community.

To form a true estimate of college life one must see all sides of it.

One must see the man who while earning money to put himself through college is helping to support his mother at home and his sister at Radcliffe.

One must see the man who strives ceaselessly to bring his classmates together in a broader and more democratic fellowship, to improve their clubs and their lives.

One must know the men of influence among the undergraduates, and see how far they are from dissipation, how deep is their consciousness of their responsibilities, how willingly they work to make college better for those who are there now, and those who will come hereafter, how cordially they co-operate with the college authorities, and how much they inititate reforms themselves.

One must see how large a number of students—both of those who are earning their way and those who are not—stand ready to help other fellows that have taken the wrong road.

It is things like these that give one courage in the administration of a college.

One must work with the students as well as for the students if he wants to know what students are.

The American college presents problems grave enough to try the spirit of any one, but a man who joins a college community in middle life, and is brought into close touch with both professors and students, gains a stronger faith in human character.

Yours very truly,

Signed) A. LAWRENCE LOWELL

New England Manufacturer Declares College Training Helps Him in Business: That While He Was in Harvard the Dissipated Students Were Forced Out Because They Didn't Keep Up Their Studies

R. T. Crane, 3d, Harvard '04, grandson of R. T. Crane, the Chicago multimillionaire, whose article attacking Harvard morals was printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN, has made a remarkable reply exclusively to the Sunday AMERICAN, in his grandfather's behalf.

He says that the [illegible] Mr. Crane says the dissipated students were good all-[illegible], [illegible] fact that they could not get on in their studies and keep from [illegible] at one and the same time.

By RICHARD TELLER CRANE, 3d (HARVARD '04).

Grandson of R. T. Crane, the Chicago multimillionaire, whose article attacking Harvard morals was printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN.

I HAVE no means of judging whether statements made by my grandfather's investigators are correct or not. Now that they have been made and published, a simple denial of their allegations does not carry any weight. The vital nature of the subject demands more than mere denial. And if any of the colleges or universities are keeping [illegible] have done all that is necessary and that this has. At present the student is taken

AMERICAN STANDARD 15

THE STANDARD SUIT VALUE OF AMERICA FOR MEN & OF ALL AGES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

If you have been buying your clothes from mail order houses, see these suits and overcoats at your dealer's and note how much better value you can now get at home for your money.

NO mail order house ever offered you such high quality all-wool material, such fine workmanship, such splendid style, as you get in the "AMERICAN STANDARD 15" Suits and Overcoats. The price is but $15, but you actually get $20 value. We guarantee this absolutely. If for any reason whatever an "AMERICAN STANDARD 15" fails to satisfy, you get a new garment free of cost in exchange.

"AMERICAN STANDARD 15" Suits and Overcoats are made in Baltimore—"The City of Economy"—in a big, clean, sunshiny factory where up-to-date methods keep the cost of production down to a minimum.

We want every man and young man in the United States to learn that there is one $15 clothes investment that carries no risk of disappointment. You can walk into any "AMERICAN STANDARD 15" dealer's store, select from the big assortment of styles and patterns on the tables and know absolutely that you are getting the greatest clothes value $15 can buy.

You can feel that you are paying no more than the right amount, too—because you get standard clothing at a standard price.

If there is no "AMERICAN STANDARD 15" dealer in your town, send us your name and address and we will send you our style book and order blank and see that your wants are filled.

HANDS SO SORE COULD NOT USE THEM

Eczema on Feet, Too. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Was Cured. They Also Cured His Sister of Breaking Out on Face and Hands.

"In the latter part of 1899 my face and head broke out with a rash. My doctor gave me some that [illegible] I gave them for months but did not give any relief. In the meantime it took on a [illegible] and sores. I then went to another doctor and he told me it was as my own doctor — that it was eczema. He also gave me medicine for that, but without relief. I could see that the mould was going to be moved from my face and body to my hands and feet, and although I didn't even think I could not heal my hands and feet. My hands would break open on the joints and would be so sore that I could not use them at times.

Then I started to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment in July, 1902, and before 1904 I was entirely cured. I therefore recommend the Cuticura Soap and Ointment to any person having skin disease. As soon as I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment I found relief at once.

My sister, Miss Rebecca Jackson had a breaking out on her face and hands the same as myself. She used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for seven or eight months, and was cured and now." Signed Samuel F. Jackson, 1217 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa., May 5, 1911.

His sister writes: "What my brother says is quite true, and you can imagine how I suffered and how glad I was to be cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Rebecca Jackson, 16 Delaware St., Trenton, N. J.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are for sale throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. book on the care and treatment of the skin, and scalp will be mailed free, on application. The Lion in the Ass's Skin

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Wisdom often disguises itself in folly.

The competent general doesn't disclose his strength—he tries to discount his real power. Unobserved force makes the fastest progress.

Massed numbers are at an advantage. Concealed artillery is more effective than the unexpected assault is hardest to resist.

Notoriety is so likely to be misleading as that which seems apparent.

More than one war has been averted by advancing in a different direction.

The fewer people that know your plans, the better hope you have of fulfilling them.

If you're headed west, there's no better way of traveling without interruption than by creating the impression that you're bound east.

The essence of military science is the ability to send an enemy off on a wild-goose chase.

Shrewdness doesn't blare and strut. Advertised might warns and summons opposition. At the right moment action speaks for itself.

Therefore, the more you are misunderstood, the greater your hope for success.

The world hates boasters. The more you talk about your immature projects, the less likely you are to bring them to image.

Hundreds who in the ordinary course of events would never know of your existence go out of their ways to thwart you, if they can detect a personal menace in your aspirations.

There's no discretion so great as that which prompts you to remain in obscurity until you're ready for the light.

When you can make another feel that he is smarter than you —when you can impress him with the evidence of his superiority and leave him with the idea that you are a dunderhead—you have half won the fight.

There's no flattery so subtle as that which elevates another to a level.

It's much better to have people wonder why you don't think you're worth while than to wonder why.

The very crowd that the brass band attracts blocks its way.

The FINEST RESORT and BEAUTY SPOT on the ATLANTIC OCEAN

(In the Vicinity of Greater Boston)

A health-giving locality, refreshing breezes, unsurpassed view overlooking harbor, most excellent place for yachting, large Steamboat Wharf for Mooring Craft.

THE FACTS

This land is surrounded by water on three sides, is high, well drained, is covered with grass and has a good beach on all sides. It is a short distance from the railroad station and five minutes' ride to the Nantasket Reservation with its healthful amusements. Electric cars run through the property. Sunset Point has a 60-foot accepted street, built by the town of Hull, has city water, electric lights and telephones.

Our restrictions insure nothing but desirable buildings and resorts on the property.

Preparations on plans for 27 more houses will be begun before September 20th.

PIANO SALE

DON'T PAY TRUST PRICES

FOR ANY MAKE PIANO

I have been asking the people for years that it is not necessary to pay luxury prices for pianos. A piano is no longer a luxury. I have taken it out of that class. I have reduced a piano to its original use. I have reduced the price to the terms of purchase to the other necessities of life.

I have published piano values to open eyes to the shell game of piano selling. I have shown how to get a first-class new piano at less than it could be bought for second hand. I am in receipt of letters daily from all over New England praising our methods. Piano Trust and Lawyers must go. I sell pianos at lower prices, easier terms to the people.

Don't buy any piano until you see me.

Truthfully,

Archbishop O'Connell, in Interview to Sunday American, talks with Deep Earnestness on Conditions of Life in Europe as he Saw Them, and Draws Inspiring Pictures of Scenes on Rhine

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN

SOON after his arrival in New York on the steamer Kroonland from Europe, where he had been sojourning for some months, I enjoyed the favor of an interview with His Grace, Archbishop O'Connell, in which he spoke of things abroad with a range of thought and of interesting observation such as he has seldom exceeded, if indeed equaled, in any utterance of a public nature spoken by him since his succession to the episcopal throne of Boston.

Every word, as he uttered it, was born of thought and of deep reflection. The whole statement, as it is written here, was filled, sentence after sentence, with keen analysis of the social and religious conditions as the archbishop found them in Europe, particularly in Germany, where, in company with Monsignor Sphaine of the Cathedral, he spent most of his time of rest in the Old World.

The descriptions of the scenes and events touched upon in the archbishop's review will be read with surpassing interest, not only by the members of his own faith, but by all patriotic Americans, of every creed, who are wise enough to heed the lessons of the hour as they are now being laid bare in Europe.

His rest in the old countries and the voyages across the Atlantic have done the archbishop unbounded physical good. He looks the picture of health, and his mind and heart are filled with the buoyancy of enthusiasm. When he is able to resume active work, on the conclusion of his week's retreat at St. John's Seminary, upon which he will enter on returning to Boston, he will be able to bring to his duties the full force and energy he has gained as the result of his valuable and productive vacation.

With the archbishop when I saw him was the Rev. Patrick J. Supple, D. D., formerly of St. Peter's, Cambridge, and now rector of St. Hugh's Church in Roxbury.

Sees Faithful Catholics in Germany

In opening our conversation Archbishop O'Connell said: "I am very happy to be home again and it is quite evident that I am at home, for the moment I crossed the gangplank the newspaper representative was conspicuously present." He jokingly added: "As I am now a member of the press myself I am only too happy to show you every courtesy. Now, let us begin. On what subject do you wish me to talk?"

I suggested that Boston would like him to speak of the moral and political conditions of the people as he found them in Europe.

"Very good," said the archbishop, "but that is a large field, too large, I fear, for proper treatment this morning in a single statement. Suppose we reduce the field to one part of a single nation, Germany for example, and specifically to that part of Germany which borders upon the Rhine, from Arnim down to Basle?"

Archbishop O'Connell said:

"Nothing could be more stimulating than even a superficial survey of the life of the people in that region. As compared with large districts in other countries over which I traveled, Westphalia and the Rhine provinces stand out in marked excellence, whether considered from an economic or moral point of view. Prosperity and peace are visible everywhere and there is a happiness born of both that stamps the whole territory. Now these are precisely the provinces of Germany which are practically Catholic in their entirety.

"It happened to be within the octave of Corpus Christi that I went through these districts. Banners were waving from the church tops and from the flagstaffs over houses everywhere. The roads on both sides of the villages and towns were arcaded with boughs of trees and garlanded with evergreens, and through these arches, intended for the triumphal march of the Eucharistic processions, thousands and thousands of the healthiest and happiest people I have ever seen walked in joyous groups on their way to the picturesque old churches, from the towers of which the mass bells were pealing their invitation to the hearts of a faithful people. Oh, yes, it was a sight I shall never forget.

Social Unrest in Some Quarters

"Again and again during that happy week in the various villages along the route I jogged along side by side with those sturdy German Catholics and answered the old traditional Christian salutation, 'Laudetur Jesus Christus in aeternum, Amen.'

"Again and again we knelt on the stone pavements, with their rough-carved memorial slabs of knights in armor and rich-robed ladies of centuries ago, and felt a thrill at the thought that here was a whole region which through all the vicissitudes of centuries had stood firm and true as the crags which border the Rhine.

"Elsewhere in Germany I knew that there was neither faith nor fidelity, that there were parts bitter with the hatred of class and cold to everything except greed and gain. But Westphalia and the Rhine knew nothing of all this. The happy folk, who during this octave of Corpus Christi thronged the churches to overflowing and made the villages echo with their canticles of Christian joy, wore upon their faces neither frown nor scowl, but the frank happiness of contented lives sanctified by their holy religion.

"That week, filled to overflowing with manifestations of the practical effect of faith on the daily lives of a whole people, stamped itself upon my mind indelibly.

"Unfortunately, at other places along the route where the wayside cross had been pulled down and the old minsters were crumbling to ruin, I saw enough of the turmoil and the conflict which follow apace on the decay of faith. The university towns teemed with learning and infidelity and not even the rollicking songs of the student groups could conceal the all too-evident indications of mental discontent and social unrest. It is well for Germany that there is a Westphalia and the provinces of the Rhine.

"I saw the palace of peace, which is building in The Hague, and which, I believe, is the gift of Mr. Carnegie. No doubt it will be a magnificent structure. No doubt, too, there will be a great many conferences and gatherings under its roof. No doubt, also, the horrors of war will be discussed and the causes of international conflicts analyzed and learnedly dissected.

Religion Protects Even Governments

"But it is just as probable that international peace will come from such discussions and conferences as it is that the corpse on the dissecting table will come to life.

"The world had no need to wait for the Twentieth Century or the Peace Palace at The Hague to know about the causes of war or the horrors that follow in its train. What the world needs is not a knowledge of all these things.

"I went to the palace in The Hague where the first peace conference gathered at the invitation of the Emperor of Russia. As I looked about the room in which the representatives of the Great Powers had assembled I reflected that they had precisely excluded the one universal moral power, the only one capable of really understanding the true causes of international discord and of offering the only efficient remedy for it all, the Father of Christendom, the Vicar of Christ, and I instantly recalled that, in a few brief months after the conference had made its spectacular entrance and exit, thousands upon thousands of Russian soldiers lay dead upon the fields of the Farthest East and the Emperor of Russia had other thoughts to occupy him besides those of scientific inquiries and scholastic theories about war and its consequences.

"Oh! peace palaces, no matter how beautiful they are, will never make peace no more than the crumbling minsters from which the Real Presence has fled will bring back to Germany the happiness and the peace of Westphalia and the provinces of the Rhine.

"Governments may make laws, but it is only religion that can protect even governments; and while in the university and the school and the palace of peace and the congress of nations Christ's message to man is ignored, men may teach and discuss and dissect and analyze social evils, but they will never heal them. The world has had enough of ineffectual and bombastic intellectualism, which strives to reduce the sentiments of the human heart to a science. What it needs is the simple, wholesome faith of the happy Westphalian peasant.

"What is it that, after all, has kept the faith flourishing in Western Germany? What is it that has kept out the canker-worm that has eaten the heart out of other parts of the same country? It is the strong spirit of Catholic organization. The great congresses of Mainz and Cologne, which have taught the people, not speculative nonsense about wars and social ills, but which have thrilled their hearts with impulses of faith and love and hope and true fraternity.

"That is just what I expect Federation to do right here among us, and with God's help it will.

"While the hearts of our Catholic men are kept alive with the fire of their noble and holy faith there will be no room for the bitterness and the ashes of unbelief masquerading as enlightenment and progress.

"I saw the streets of the great city of Mainz filled to overflowing with a procession of 80,000 strong men of every class from the highest noble to the humblest peasant. Aloft, above the heads of this great army was the banner of the cross of Christ, and as the pavements resounded to their martial tread, marching as only stalwart Germans can, sweeping down the broad avenues to the great old Cathedral, under whose lofty roof their spiritual chief stood awaiting them, the air was rent with their great and thrilling battle cry, 'May Jesus Christ be praised forever and forever.'

Love of Law and Peace Shown

"And this was no mere spectacle. Away back in their villages along the Rhine, away up in the sloping vineyards, is always visible a mighty fact that the law of Christ and of His church was still potent in the everyday work of the people. No red banner of anarchy there, but only the love of law and peace, the true peace of Christ, in their hearts and in their lives.

"That is what our federation must mean to us. That is what our Knights of Columbus and our Holy Name societies mean to us, which to-day, thank God, are flourishing all over the diocese. No mere, vain-glorious parade of numbers, but the strengthening of the spiritual life, which is always helped by public manifestations of unity."

In closing the interview, which was characterized throughout by the most impressive earnestness and emphasis, the archbishop gave expression to his sorrow at the death of Dr. Thomas Dwight and referred feelingly to the last visit he paid to him at Nahant before he went away.

He spoke of the doctor's grand life and character, and of his devotion, in all circumstances, to the interests of the church and of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, of which Dr. Dwight was for many years a leader.

"The World had no need to wait for the Twentieth Century or the peace palace at The Hague to know about the causes of war or the horrors that follow in its train."

"The World has had enough ineffectual and bombastic intellectualism which strives to reduce the sentiments of the human heart to a science."

"No red banner of Anarchy in Catholic Westphalia, but only the love of law and peace, the true peace of Christ in the hearts and lives of the people."

The Ghost—by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

II

THROUGH the open door of dreamland
Came a ghost of long ago, long ago
When I wakened, all unheeding
Was the phantom to my pleading,
For he would not turn and go.
But beside me all the day
In my work and in my play

III

And he wore no shroud or cere cloth.
As he wandered at my side, close beside.
He was clothed in royal splendor,
And his eyes were deep and tender,
While he walked in stately pride.
And he seemed like some great king,
Not afraid of anything,
As he wandered at my side, close beside.

III

Not a vague and pallid phantom
Was this ghost that came to me, followed me
Though he rose from regions haunted,
Though he came unbid, unwanted,
He was very fair to see.
Like the radiant sun in space
Was the halo 'round the face
Of that ghost that came to me, followed me.

IV

Then I turned to him, commanding
That he go the way he came, whence he came,
But he answered me in sorrow
"May the Past not seek to borrow
From the Present without blame
Just one memory from its store,
Ere it goes to come no more
Back the pathway that it came, whence it came?"

V

Then, ashamed of my full coffers,
I gave forth from Memory's hold, wondrous hold,
All I owed of tax and duty
For remembered hours of beauty.
Which I paid in thoughts of gold.
Yet my present seemed to be Richer still for all the tee

SICK HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, TORPID LIVER, CONSTIPATION—CASCARETS.

Sick headache! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes ... headache, hat dull, awful, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purify the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organs are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle, cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

THE judges in this country—practically all of them lawyers — are simply human beings like others, chosen from a certain profession, ELECTED AND PAID BY THE PEOPLE to administer justice.

Their work is the most important work of government, next to the making of the laws.

And, unfortunately, it has been proved repeatedly in this country that, when they please—as in recent Supreme Court cases—the judges make their work MORE important than any other branch of the government, for they actually create laws, in their interpreting of laws.

We see such law-making by judges when some judge owned by a gas trust decides that the people have no constitutional right to regulate the price of gas.

And you see the corrupt law making tendency of the judge still more shamefully exhibited in the case of a notorious judge in New York who is jokingly referred to by the Street Car Trust as their most valuable asset, and who has given a dozen or more unrighteous decisions in favor of that trust and against the public welfare.

You see judges throughout the country not only making the laws, but unmaking the Constitution of the United States when they issue injunctions that violate the Constitution, denying to bodies of citizens the right of free speech or of free assembly.

And you see judges only too frequently denying the principle of equality in this country by treating the poor in one way and the rich in another.

A shameful incident of this kind was the series of decisions by a judge recently imported from his little neighborhood for the express purpose of letting off certain trust criminals with paltry fines.

That the above statements are true nobody will contradict.

President Taft will not contradict their truth.

And yet President Taft vetoed the bill which would have given Statehood to Arizona simply because the people of Arizona in their Constitution reserved the right to put a judge, ELECTED by themselves, off the bench when they find him to be corrupt or otherwise unfit for judicial work.

This veto by Mr. Taft is not serious in one way, although it is a very serious denial of the fundamental rights of the people of this country.

The President's veto cannot be lastingly harmful, because in the first place the people have the power to get rid of Mr. Taft next year if they choose. And, with or without Mr. Taft's amiable consent, the people of Arizona and of every State have the right to put their judges off the bench, and also to put them in jail if necessary, and if they please.

Mr. Taft abuses his power by vetoing a Statehood bill because the people have exercised their constitutional rights to form a constitution in accordance with their own beliefs and not in violation of the Federal Constitution. But luckily his veto is ineffective.

For the people of a Territory, under duress, will submit to Mr. Taft a Constitution such as he may choose to extort with his power of veto. And when they attain Statehood they will make him realize that a State in this country is not a child to be whipped by a lawyer raised to the Presidency, but an organization far above the reach of any lawyer.

This newspaper is not inclined to speak harshly of Mr. Taft's veto, undemocratic as it is.

Mr. Taft is a lawyer and has been a judge.

And he reveals his personality in the use and the wording of his veto which attributes to judges and lawyers a certain sanctity, moral superiority and intellectual force lacking in the ordinary citizen.

Mr. Taft's veto is simply the expression of many years on the bench. And it is a warning against giving as much power as we do to lawyers and to judges.

Mr. Taft has been a judge, and so when the people form a constitution which gives them the power to recall judges, he says: "No, you can't do that. The Judges are pure and holy and above you. I KNOW, FOR I MYSELF WAS A JUDGE."

Mr. Taft sees no harm in giving people power to put their Governor out of office, although the Governor of a State stands in power far above any individual judge. But Mr. Taft has never been a Governor, and so his self esteem is not involved.

Instead of speaking harshly of Mr. Taft's veto we must consider it good naturedly as an exhibition of feeble human nature in an otherwise estimable individual.

It is quite likely that if the people of Arizona were accustomed to electing an official State dog catcher, and if they had put in their Constitution a clause permitting them to remove the dog catcher from office, and if some dog catcher had the power to veto that clause—it is probable that the dog catcher would veto the clause involving the constitutional right to remove dog catchers. The same would be true of an official rat catcher or mouse catcher or croton bug catcher.

Each of these would probably think that dog, rat, mouse, or bug catcher possesses some peculiar quality that ought to put him out of the people's reach.

The interesting thing is the fact that Mr. Taft's veto of the people's right to take off the bench the Judges that THEY PUT ON THE BENCH is VERY loudly applauded by all the newspapers that are owned by the trusts, and by all the corrupt big financial powers.

You know why trust owned newspapers and the big corporations do not want the people to have the right to take judges off the bench.

It is because trusts and corruptionists fight the people with the judges that they, the trusts own. They get from such judges their valuable decisions.

Some of the judges—they are among the most dangerous and vile criminals in this land—serve the trusts faithfully in return for past fees, future hopes, or present bribes, AND THEY DARE TO DO THIS BECAUSE THE PEOPLE UNDER THE LAW HAVE NO POWER TO REMOVE THEM.

It is nonsensical for Mr. Taft or anybody else to say that the right of the people to impeach a judge is sufficient.

Does not every man know that some of our judges are dishonest to the core, bought and sold with the assets of corporations—Federal judges as well as State judges?

And WHEN are these men impeached or convicted?

The people KNOW that they are dishonest, but can they prove that a corporation owns a man? Can they uncover the ramifications of graft, corruption and shameful influence that makes the big man laugh when he sees the little man suing him before a certain judge?

If the people are intelligent enough to put men ON the bench, and if they are entitled to the power to put them on the bench, we say that the people are intelligent enough and they are entitled to the power to put them off the bench.

And if Mr. Taft or any other man denies the right of the people to remove Judges, if Mr. Taft declares that there exists within the body politic one set of men morally, intellectually or otherwise sacred and superior to the people (namely, the lawyer class), then he declares republican government a joke and a failure and decides that the people are unfit to govern themselves. HE DECLARES THE PEOPLE UNFIT TO PROTECT THEMSELVES BY THEIR OWN ACT AND THEIR OWN INTELLIGENCE AGAINST THE MOST DANGEROUS FORM OF DISHONESTY, AGAINST THE MOST HARMFUL ABUSE OF POWER.

The people HAVE the right to remove their judges; they will maintain that right. They will establish it in every State of the Union.

Neither Mr. Taft nor any other lawyer or ex-judge will prevent this.

The result will be more honor for the just judge, disgrace for the dishonest judge and recognition of the fact that there is only ONE power in this country, which is the power of the people, that elect the judges and pay them, that put them on the bench by their will and will pull them off the bench by that same will when they choose.

The Power That Puts a Judge on the Bench Will Pull Him Off When He Proves Himself Corrupt, and No Veto by Any Lawyer or Ex-Judge Will Prevent This.

Grin's Modern Fairy Tales

ONCE upon a time there dwelt a powerful King in a great city.

He was known far and wide as the "Plaster King," because he manufactured everything in the line of plasters from the silky, pinky stuff one uses for a cut finger, to the sort that drives one insane when one attempts to remove it.

Now, this King was not always a King. When young he was merely a Druggist's Boy, who had married a very pretty girl as poor as he.

The Plaster King had a lot of brains when he was young. He used to concoct plasters for the old-fashioned druggist, who employed him. These plasters he made by the yard and cut up in small pieces. They cost almost 3 cents a yard to make, and they used to sell for 50 cents each. As one yard of plaster made six 50-cent plasters, by counting secretively upon your fingers you may readily figure for yourself that the profit per yard was $2.97.

And so the Plaster King, who was then the plain Druggist's Boy, saved his meagre salary, and with the aid of his wife he made up a quantity of plasters. His money he used in advertising them.

Now, his handsome and loving wife devoted all her energies to helping him. She worked day and night when his factory consisted of their kitchen table and the sink.

When his business became a great industry, and then a great combination of industries, and there was no need for his wife to slave any more, she was half worked to death, tired and aged.

The Plaster King had become a great man. He traveled and was feted and banqueted. He had a palace at Newport, another at Bar Harbor, still others at Tuxedo and Lenox, and traveled about in great touring cars. but he wasn't happy. He seemed to have lost his common sense as he acquired common cents.

There were wine suppers and theatre parties and such things, and he got in the habit of leaving his wife alone in some of their great houses, because she was not dashing and beautiful and slangy and fond of late suppers and the theatres and such things.

Finally he became deeply interested in Senorita Bandanez, of noble Spanish birth. He knew this was true, for all the theatre posters, depicting her kicking the fleecy clouds right out of the azure sky said so.

To be truthful, Senorita Bandanez's honest-and-true name was Sarah Jacquez, and the nearest she had ever been to Spain was Montreal, where she was born. But the Plaster King had been too busy getting the world stuck on his goods to learn the difference between French-Canadian and Old Madrid accents.

His intimate friends warned him frequently.

"Better cut it out, old man" they told him. "You don't know her, but she's the finest trimmer that ever looked in a mirror. They call her The Sorceress, and she lives up to it."

But the Plaster King became very dignified. When a man has from thirty to seventy millions he can display more dignity than a little boy with his first suspenders, and so the Plaster King intimated in violent language that he was ever seven and could manage his own affairs. One by one his friends merely murmured that he was acting more like ever seventy than seven, and went their ways.

And one night The Sorceress looked dreamily at the Plaster King over the top of her wine glass and said: "Dickie, dear, I am homesick for dear Spain, the land of romance and siestas. Ah, me, my lot is so pitiful. If I had only met you before, if I only had such an Adonis as you"——

And a half hour more of that sort of talk, but she had no need of piling it on so thick; that "Adonis" remark settled it. The Plaster King took a secret glance at his flushed face in the silver vase that held a bouquet of orchids, and decided she was right.

Of course the Plaster King had no means of knowing The Sorceress had told her dressing room chum only a couple hours before that she was going to "Kidnap the old Geezer Plaster King and burn his millions so fast it would always look like a Venetian sunset wherever she was."

Then the Plaster King made a business trip abroad. The Sorceress also went abroad to that dear Spain, which she didn't know any more about than she did about Nineveh in the time of Cyrus.

The Plaster King's son and his lawyer and his business manager also went abroad. When they got through with the Plaster King he had settled ten millions on his wife and ten millions on his son and a million on his business manager.

His business manager threatened to give away his plaster formulas if he didn't; his lawyer threatened to drag him back and put him in stripes for violating the Sherman act if he didn't give his wife the ten millions; while his son wasn't so delicate about it. He merely told the old man he'd blow his fool head off if he, too, didn't get ten millions, and he exhibited a 44 Colt to prove it.

Then the son went back and took charge of the plaster business and got a new Business Manager, and within six months had secured the control of everything.

Meanwhile, the wife of the Plaster King got her divorce, although she didn't want to. She did that solely to please the Plaster King.

There are such women, although they live only in fairy stories. Of course, the Plaster King married The Sorceress and bought her chateau after chateau, and filled the coal bins in them with diamonds and filled the cellars with liquors, while The Sorceress filled her face with rouge and her secret, safety deposit vaults with his money and her house with gay company.

A couple of years passed and the Plaster King looked like a Tom Powers Gloom, except for the beard. He was pale and emaciated and wrinkled, old and tottering and ill.

Now and then he heard of his first wife and of his son. He had no apparent regrets when he read accounts of his son's marriage, which was a great event back home.

The Sorceress was too clever for that. Whenever he heard from home and of his first wife and of his son—and she could not well prevent that—she would caress him and call him her "Adonis," and he would smile a foolish old smile and forget his past.

Now a Sorceress is a terrible thing; much worse than a witch, because witches are ugly and frightful and all that, and people avoid them, but a Sorceress is generally beautiful and clever, with the wisdom of the serpent, and so poor, old, broken down Plaster King's chances for escape were always growing less and less along with his fortune.

But one day something happened. It was plain to The Sorceress that the Plaster King had heard from home. When she called him her "Adonis" he snorted with rage; when she petted him he cursed her; when she wept he sneered.

"This is getting serious," The Sorceress told herself, "When a beautiful woman's tears will not move a man, it is time for drastic measures," and she puzzled her wicked brain for some method whereby she could retain her hold upon him.

She rushed to his apartments after he had left her. There he was, superintending the packing of a trunk and some hand luggage.

She ordered his man from the room and uncovered her claws, telling him he was a doddering old fool; that he wasn't wanted back home; that she wouldn't let him go, and—it that. Then she called him "Adonis" some more and wept over him until finally he pushed her roughly aside.

"They told me you were a Sorceress," he said. "They warned me, but I laughed at them. Long ago I learned they were right, and I couldn't break the spell; I couldn't break the spell, but it is broken now!

"No Sorceress living can hold me. I am going back home. I may be kicked out. I expect to be. I deserve to be. Still, I am going back home.

"Why, if I have to dig in the streets I won't mind. If they throw me bodily out of the house, I am going there. Sorceress! Sorceress, indeed! You"—— but the old Plaster King never finished it. He shrugged his shoulders, picked up his baggage, ordered his car, and that night was aboard a transatlantic liner headed for home.

And a dozen times an hour he pulled a paper from home out of his pocket and read a small paragraph tucked away among the news in the society column.

This is what he read:

"Richard Sudker is wearing a paternal smile. His wife, who was Miss Elsie Kupon, the beautiful heiress, presented him with a son last Wednesday. It is understood the boy will be named 'Richard,' both for his father and his grandfather, known as the 'Plaster King,' and who created a great sensation a few years ago by divorcing his wife and marrying the famous dancer, Senorita Bandanez."

Jokes That Made the Preachers Laugh

MANY people think that clergymen are too dignified to "crack a joke." Maybe a lot of them are, but the City Life Section had no trouble in finding several who have had amusing experiences, and who saw the joke in them, too. Here are some of them:

WHEN a young minister, with no regular charge, I was invited to preach one Sunday in a Westchester County village, the regular minister having gone on a vacation. To my horror, the local paper appeared the following week with this item:

"The Rev. Blank preached last Sunday in the ——— Church. There will be no services next Sunday in order that the church may be thoroughly renovated."

I NEVER lose an opportunity to seek to bring unbelievers to the light, and I candidly admit that I have sometimes been worsted in argument by the witty sophistries of those whose souls I sought to save. I remember a crabbed, old, retired army officer, with a caustic tongue, whom I once met. He was an atheist, and in the course of our conversation I pointed out the wonderful adaptation of the world to human needs as an evidence of Divine wisdom.

"Of course," he agreed, sarcastically. "How could men wear pants if God hadn't given 'em legs to put 'em on? And what is better adapted than the human mouth to put false teeth in?"

ALTHOUGH the incident I am about to relate occurred fully twenty years ago, I am yet unable to think of it without pain. Perhaps your readers may not be so sensitive, and may even perceive in it the elements of humor.

As a young minister, before my marriage, I lived in a boarding house kept by a young widow. She had one child, a six-year-old girl. As a rule I have always been very popular with the children, but this little sprite, for some reason unknown, seemed to fear me.

One night—I learned the full details later—the youngster was very naughty, and the mother threatened that the minister would come and bite her if she didn't behave.

"Would he bite you, too?" asked the child.

"Yes, dear," said the mother, in desperation.

"Has he ever bitted you?" continued the little imp.

The next night at dinner, with all the boarders gathered around the table, the little girl pointed her finger straight at me, and said, defiantly:

"If you don't quit bitin' my mamma, I'll tell the police on you."

Of course, you may readily understand what construction the delighted boarders put on this allegation, and why I moved out of the house a few days later.

ONE of my brother ministers in a cross-roads village up-State is the most versatile man of my acquaintance. The hamlet consists of a church, a store building which also houses the post office and the bank, and a few dwellings. The minister gives his services to the congregation gratis as he can well afford to do, since he owns both the general store and bank, and in addition is postmaster and an attorney-at-law.

Not long ago, in his capacity of merchant, he gave an order to a traveling salesman for an invoice of jewelry. The house proved to be a fake concern, and the goods were far from being as represented. They were immediately returned, but the fakirs continued to attempt to collect the bill.

First they drew a sight draft through the local bank, but this was promptly returned. Then they addressed a letter to the postmaster, inquiring about the financial status of the merchant. As a final resort, they wrote to the "Leading Lawyer" seeking to engage his services for the collection of the account. Of course, all the letters reached my friend, who finally became angry. He wrote to his persecutors as follows:

"The undersigned is the merchant on whom you attempted to palm off your worthless goods. The undersigned is president and owner of the bank to which you sent your sight draft. The undersigned is the postmaster to whom you wrote, and the undersigned is the lawyer whose services you sought to engage for your nefarious business.

"And if the undersigned were not also the pastor of the church at this place, he would tell you where to go."

ATLANTIC CITY is a gay place, and its seductions sometimes cause even the faithful to slip. Not long ago a big convention of a young people's religious society was held in the New Jersey resort, and I was one of the speakers. One night at the hotel I was awakened by the sound of violent weeping, which apparently came from the adjoining room. I knew that the occupant was a young man—a strapping big fellow from the rural districts—so I went in to inquire into the cause of his grief. The moment I opened the door the fumes of alcohol struck me in the face.

"Oh, parson," hailed the young chap, who was lying fully dressed on the bed, "you're just the man I want —his—to see. I p-promised mother I'd say the Lord's Prayer every night b-b-before I went to s-sleep, and I'm so d drunk I can't remember it."

I AM seventy-five years of age, and I have been preaching the gospel for over half a century. In that time I have had many experiences of many kinds, but none more amusing than during my first pastorate as a missionary in a little mining camp in the far West. The dance hall in which services were held for a time was hardly satisfactory, as the sounds of revelry from the adjoining saloon were not of a character to promote religious feelings and thoughts.

Finally, I succeeded in raising enough money to build a small church, and a plot not far from the saloon was donated as the site of the edifice. This did not please the owner of the saloon and dance hall, who had been very proud of having a sky pilot as one of his attractions. He said nothing, however, until the church was completed, and then he approached me and ordered the sacred edifice immediately moved. I demanded to know why.

"Well, sir," he declared, "as sheriff of these yere diggins, I have been a-lookin' up the law, and I find that there can't be no church within two hundred feet of a saloon."

And we had to move the church!

WHEN I was given a new charge in a Western city I was, upon my arrival, shown over the town by the son of the minister I was to succeed. He was a bright and intelligent young man, but, I found inclined to be a trifle critical and irreverent. A fashionably gowned woman passed in an automobile, and my guide remarked that she was the wife of a wealthy banker and a member of my congregation.

"What's sfluce," he added, "she's been instrumental in attracting more women to our church than any other ten members."

"How does she accomplish it?" I inquired.

"Why," the young man explained, "she wears a new costume to church every Sunday."

SEVERAL years ago I was the pastor of a country church. One Sabbath after services I went to dinner at the home of a deacon, and was amazed at the enormous appetite of my host's little son. Nor was I surprised a little later to find him crying and doubled up with pain.

"What's the matter?" I inquired.

"Pup-pup-please, sir," he replied, placing his hands over his abdomen, "I have a pup-pain in my vowels and sometimes y and w."

A WEALTHY but none too intelligent lady of my congregation had just returned from abroad.

"I suppose you visited all the famous churches and cathedrals of Europe?" I inquired.

"Well—er—no, not all of them," she replied. "When I was in London I hunted and hunted, but, do you know, I couldn't find the Church of England, and everybody was so rude when I asked them where it was."

A MAN in Atlantic City brought to court by his wife, charged with mistreatment because he refused to kiss her after a quarrel, was ordered by the judge to kiss his wife once every day.
We are astonished at the severity of the penalty imposed by his Honor. We thought that the days of the Inquisition were over.
According to the judge's verdict, that poor man cannot show contempt of wife without being guilty of contempt of court. We believe the judge exceeded his powers. No court has the right to order a man who to kiss or how often. If this is a free country and we are free men, our kissers are our own to do with as we please. The court has no jurisdiction in the matter as long as in kissing, we exercise "reasonable restraint." And if that judge insists that every husband should kiss his wife every day, then, judging from some wives we have seen, on the subject of kissing he is no judge.

SHE was lingering over her hair, letting it fall in a dark, lustrous cloud to her waist, then combing and gathering it and bringing it under discipline. She put on her gown, managing somehow to fasten it, her lithe, young body and slender arms aiding her to achieve the impossible between neck and shoulders. Finally she pinned on her big, white hat.
At the door she paused for a second; took a last look at the quiet, white little room, tranquil and silent in the limelight. Then she turned off the light and went out, fondly holding in her hand a key which fitted no door of her own.

SAID a fan of Toronto, "I see
There's talk of re-cip-roc-i-tee,
And I'm strong for it, Bo,
If 'twill give us a show
At the Eastern League pennant, by gee!

FROM White River Junction, Vermont,
Comes word that Teddy just won't
Head the ticket next year.
But the reason, I fear,
Is that he knows that he can't.

"IT was me," said Ethel, "that shot him."
"Nunno," declared Lillian, "I got him,"
And so in their cell
They argued it well
As to which of 'em rully did pot him.

"HER memory's dear," quoth Maloney,
But his lamps were tearless and stony.
For she wasn't dead,
And what he had said
Referred to her darned alimony.

"FOR the love of Mike," said Judge Just,
"you
Be reasonable, you naughty trust; you
Make me quite sad
By being so bad;
Do you want to force me to bust you?"

"BY deeds, not by words," said Young Fred,
"My love I shall prove ere we wed."
"You've got the right dope,
Freddie, dear, and I hope
You brought the deeds with you," she said.

"ON Father's Day," gurgled Miss Fad,
"I shall make dear papa's heart glad
By wearing a rose."
But then, I suppose,
The bill for the rose went to "dad."

SAID a St. Looey man, "This is great—

WHEN THE MILKMAN HAD TO BE A "DOOK!"

Humorous Scenes from "Snobs," in Which Frank McIntyre Is Now Playing at the Hudson Theatre. Published by Permission of Henry B. Harris

DISNEY—It's a bright Tuesday for us, but it's a very black Friday for 164 families in Mount Vernon Place.

HENRY DISNEY, a fat, jovial purveyor of milk, is suddenly apprised of the fact that he is of noble English birth and has fallen heir to the title of "Duke of Walshire" through the death of his uncle. He wants to remain "incog," however, until he has acquired a polish and has won the affection, before she knows he's a duke, of Nondas Parkyn, whom he has just met. He assures his bosom friend, Buck Reade, that the latter is to share his good fortune.

CHARACTERS IN THE SCENES.

HENRY DISNEY.....	Ex-Milkman. Now Duke
BUCK READE	His Bosom Friend
PHIPPS MAYNADIER	His Lawyer
NONDAS PARKYN	The Lady of His Hopes

Scene I.—Disney's humble lodgings

Scene II.—At a fashionable country club.

MAYNADIER—Your Grace, I congratulate you. Today we were have found that your father assumed the name of Disney and married Celia Forrest, your mother. When your parents died, you came to live with your uncle. These papers prove it. You go to England as the greatest man in the United Kingdom next to the Royal Family—the Duke of Walshire.

DISNEY.

Good—Gawd! Me—a—a—dook? 'Tis better to be on the level, or somebody 'ull get killed!

MAYNADIER.

You have to go to Spring Hunt House, Cambridgeshire, Hampton Lacey, Berks, Castle Grayfield, on the Marches, Richmond Castle——

READE

Now, if you are a duke, Henry, you can't go on driving a milk-wagon.

DISNEY:

Listen, Buck. I ain't got any affection for that milk-wagon. It ain't going to give me any pain not to get up at five o'clock a morning. But if you think I'm gunna England and make a holy show outa myself before all those dooks and people, you got another thing coming. You can't make no dook outa me just by telling me I'm one.

MAYNADIER:

Well, what are you going to do?

DISNEY:

You're gunna teach me what I'm gunna do, Maynadier. Teach me, see? 'Course I ain't gonna drink out of finger bowls or make any such breaks as that. But I don't talk right, I don't dress right. I don't do a lot of things right that a dook oughta do. So I'm going to have you take me into society, that's what. And when I get a sort of crust on, I'll hit the pike for England. Am I rich?

MAYNADIER:

The conservative value of your estate is about fourteen million pounds. In dollars, seventy millions.

DISNEY:

Good Gawd! Reade, get me a drink of water. On the level? Well, I'll have to have somebody to manage for me, that's all. How'd you like to be it?

MAYNADIER:

Manage for you, you mean? Why, I'd be charmed of course. That is, if the salary suited.

DISNEY:

Fix your own price. I can't think in that kind of money. Bring me the contract tomorrow and I'll sign it. That is, if you'll promise not to tell a soul that I'm the dook until I give you leave.

MAYNADIER:

Not tell any one?

DISNEY.

Sure. If they knew I was a dook they'd play up sweet to me just like you're doing now, and I wouldn't stand any show finding out when I did right and when I did wrong. No, you gotta introduce me as plain Henry Disney.

MAYNADIER:

I'm—I'm sorry—I—I'm afraid I can't.

DISNEY:

What? Won't I go without the label?

MAYNADIER

It isn't that. I'm sorry. But I'm a lawyer, and a lawyer has so few chances for legitimate advertising. I just couldn't help giving you a boost. It's in the Evening News and The Star, too.

DISNEY

What? With my name—and all—er?——

MAYNADIER

No. Only the announcement. Look here.

READE: (reading paper.)

"Missing Peer a fellow townsman. Phipps Maynadier, locates the Duke of Walshire. Working here in humble capacity with no knowledge of his illustrious ancestry. Veritable romance!"——

DISNEY

Jim—hm—. My name ain't there. It just says you're hep to the dook, and that he's got a bum jo.

MAYNADIER

Of course, I didn't dare say more until I had seen your papers. But don't you see, my dear fellow, even if I introduced you as Disney people would guess right away? I might as well tell them and be done with it.

DISNEY

That's so. That's so.

MAYNADIER

Let me take you to New York. I know lots of nice people there and you wouldn't attract so much attention.

DISNEY

Not for mine. I wanta stay here, right here.

MAYNADIER

Why here?

DISNEY

'Member that girl that was just here? Miss Parkyn? Well, she made a hit with me. I'm for her—strong. When she walked out I didn't ever expect to see her again. 'Cause I was a milk wagon driver and she was a swell lady. But there's been a fresh deal since then, and she can plug in my ancestral castles if she takes a notion. Do you make me?

MAYNADIER.

You won't have to ask her but once.

DISNEY.

Don't pull that. How could she like me just seeing me once?

MAYNADIER:

We are talking about two entirely different things. I say any girl would jump at the chance of being Duchess of Walshire.

DISNEY:

But she won't know.

(suddenly to Reade).

Buck, you know you're going to England with me, don't you?

READE:

I—you are——

DISNEY:

Nix on that. Do you wanta help me?

READE:

You know, Henry, I'd do anything——

DISNEY:

All right. Now this newspaper don't give us time for the dook. If Maynadier introduces us both at the same time, they'll think you're it. Why, it's great. Look at him. Would you take me for a dook who's he was around?

MAYNADIER.

Have you gone crazy?

DISNEY:

Well, if I have, "I'll come back." Look at my white hands; observe his intellectual brow. Does he step all over himself when he talks? He don't. Does he murder the English grammar? He don't. All his life he's been training to be a——. I owe his time's come. Buck, there, unanimously elected all those barons at Runnymede and earls and things that Maynadier says I am——why don't you say I am, Maynadier? Ain't you got no reason for that great man, the Duke of Walshire?

SCENE II

DISNEY:

Say, I seem to be in Dutch all 'round. What's the matter with me now?

NONDAS

With you personally there's nothing the matter. You have the courage of your convictions. But your necktie is shocking—it's almost a cravat.

DISNEY

I thought it a pretty shade.

NONDAS

Then I should advise you to give up thinking altogether. You look, you wouldn't look half bad if you were dressed properly.

DISNEY:

So you think it's bad, eh?

NONDAS:

Bad? It's a sartorial crime. Come away at once. I've got a golf necktie in my locker that I'll let you have. I'm sorry I haven't shoes and waistcoat, too. Come along.

DISNEY.

That's the way to talk. Put me right. I was a bonehead to blow myself before asking somebody—but how about the bowwows? They are pretty, ain't they? Look here and here and here.

(Pointing to cuff links.)

NONDAS (Exits).

DISNEY.

Well, they'll have to come after them.

(Enter Reade and Maynadier.)

READE

Do I look all right? Do I?

MAYNADIER

As they are my clothes, and you are my height, you were bound to.

READE:

So this is a club, a country club, after reading so much about them, to think of me being in one! Do they play golf in here?

DISNEY.

No, Buck, thats just the same as sammy. Have to play it out in the lot—out there.

MAYNADIER.

I say, you know that necktie is a bit off.

DISNEY:

It'll be all off in a minute. Miss Parkyn is going to give me a new one.

MAYNADIER.

And you might let those trousers down a foot——

DISNEY:

If I let 'em down I'll have to put a piece on my vest.

READE:

DISNEY

It is a bright Tuesday for us, but it's a very black Friday for 164 families in Mount Vernon Place.

READE

What do you mean?

DISNEY

MAYNADIER

And your bar, Disney.

DISNEY

I know what you're going to say——five dollar bet on a fifty cent head—well! It wasn't given me a headache yet.

MAYNADIER

I wanted you to look just——

DISNEY

Like a dook? Hey. Can't do it. Maynadier. There's many a slip from milk cans to aristocracy. Why they don't even use milk out——

MAYNADIER

DISNEY

Lemon? Some of the members I've seen ought to look out; if they ever run short they'll kidnap that small plump boy—(pushing)——

MAYNADIER:

You mean Bradley Fairfax?

DISNEY.

That sounds like a good name for him.

MAYNADIER

Well, I must be off, Disney. Reade and you should remember yourselves quite at home.

I'll have cards fixed up for——

DISNEY

Let me a pink one.

MAYNADIER (exits).

I'll get you the usual color.

DISNEY

Well, Buck! You look like a mixer I used to sample—little on both ends and all mucked out in the middle. Have you seen your swell helps out there? I've seen mine. Miss Parkyn you know.

READE

Just think of her father making three million dollars in the preserving business.

DISNEY.

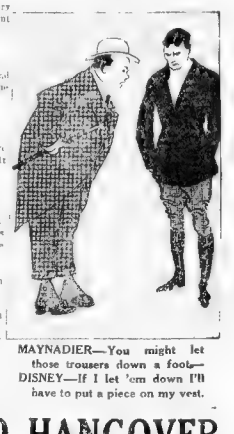
NONDAS

Mr. Disney, come and get your tie.

DISNEY

There's Parkyn's pet peach now! See you later, Buck. Don't pull any rough stuff or the login will get you.

DISNEY doesn't make much of a hit with the fashionable set because of his rough talk and manners, but he wins the affections of Nondas, nevertheless, and as soon as he does he makes known his identity, much to the chagrin of title hunting women who had believed Reade to be the duke.



MAYNADIER—You might let those trousers down a foot—DISNEY—If I let 'em down I'll have to put a piece on my vest.

WHY I LEFT MY {HUSBAND / WIFE} By Wex Jones

WHY I LEFT MY HUSBAND.

I WAS a young girl of nineteen when I married James. James had played centre fullback for Yale, or some college like that, and every one said that he was a most successful young man. While I do not care much for money, I have never had any thoughts who made me run away from a bank account. And no one thought that James was so successful did not inspire me with any hatred of him.

We were married after James left Cornell and went to live in a furnished room on Twenty-ninth street. It was not very comfortable there, but James assured me that soon as the great business men who knew of his career would give him a fat job.

The first day James went out, telling me that he was going to take a position with the General Electric Company, as the president, who was a Harvard graduate, had once patted him on the back [illegible] of the greatest [illegible] ever [illegible].

Para[illegible] James [illegible] said I was [illegible] be better.

He had seem[illegible] [illegible] in the morning that I asked him what he had done. It appears that he [illegible] president of the company.

I was a good deal, said James.

"What sort of a position?" asked I.

"Oh, any kind with good [illegible] there like that," replied James.

"Have you had any experience [illegible] den?"

Certainly. I [illegible] I kicked [illegible] said James.

The grocer did not [illegible] bell, and in a few moments [illegible] the street, where the crowd [illegible] more unsuccessful young man.

I felt a good deal disappointed, [illegible] went out next morning to [illegible] I [illegible] I [illegible] Wall Street. [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible] I asked him why and he told me that [illegible] broker, or whatever they call those Wall street men, told him a football player, as such, was worth about 20 cents a day to him to run a lawn mower or something like that on his farm.

James, as a matter of fact, did go into the railroad business, but that was after I left him. He became a switch tender on the Smith street car line.

WHY I LEFT MY WIFE.

When I first met Lucy she was dressed in some kind of a white suit, if that is what they call it, and she told me that it had cost only $2.17. She told me also that one of them bated her the entire Summer, so I guessed that her bills for clothes couldn't amount to very much.

When we went to a restaurant Lucy said she wasn't hungry, and from the jokes I had read in the comic papers I began to fear for my bankroll. However, she positively refused to eat anything except a chicken sandwich which cost fifteen cents.

After I got home to my room I got out a sheet of paper and began to figure.

One dress for Summer	$2 17
One dress for Winter.....	2 17
Three meals a day for 30 days at 18c.....	164 20
Total living expenses for Lucy for one year....	$168 53

As you see, that is little more than $14 a month, and I was glad that I could meet this additional expense easily enough. So I asked Lucy if she would marry me and she said yes.

We were married in the [illegible] of the suit came to $7.50. Here was more than half a month's living expenses gone at one clip, and no dress left to [illegible].

Well, [illegible] [illegible] were married I found that $14 wouldn't pay for one meal for Lucy, and [illegible] I made up my mind to [illegible] house and [illegible] too. Who can blame me?

WHY I RETURNED TO MY HUSBAND

His father died and left him a million.

WHY I RETURNED TO MY WIFE

I didn't.

ADVENTURES OF HAROLD HANGOVER

By William F. Kirk

CHAPTER XLVI.

AN ENCOUNTER WITH FAUST.

"WHO is this fellow Faust that all the papers are talking about?" asked Harold Hangover.

"I'm sure I don't know," replied Marguard, who was also jealous of the great recruit from Marco, Kansas.

"The first time that he says a word to me," mused Harold Hangover, "I am going to murder his mush, meaning that I am going to obliterate his features. That goes the way that it lays, and you boys who have known me for so many years know that I never indulge in any of them idle boasts."

"To whom are you talking to?" he asked, and in every word [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] last proposition.

"I am talking to you, Busher," said Mr. Faust. "You have been sweeping around here and talking about your fine education until everybody is sick of the sound of your voice. I am here to show you the difference between a ball player with brains and a ball player that knows little, if anything. I am going to ask you a few questions, and if you can answer them I shall purchase a soft drink for thee. Come on, now, Mr. Wise Guy, answer me this. How many States are there in the Union?"

"Why do you come to me with that line of talk?" asked Harold Hangover. "Some one might think I am an atlas."

But you do not answer me," insisted Mr. Faust.

"I could can ask more questions than a wise guy can answer," retorted our hero. "If you are in the question business, I will light you a duel. How many wives did Henry the Eighth have?"

"I didn't know he was married," contessed the shamefaced Faust.

"Ha, ha," laughed Harold Hangover. "And so you are the educated kid. Well, tell me this: Can you bound Uruguay and Paraguay, and what are their principal products?"

Again the face of the Kansas pitcher was a mask. He pawed around in the sand as if he were a schoolboy looking for a knothole in which to stick his toe.

"I guess you got me that time, also," he admitted.

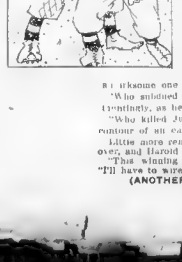
"I do not know," replied the [illegible] Mr. Faust.

"How do you say it in Greek?"

"I do not know."

Ha, ha," laughed Harold Hangover, for the second time. "Well let me explain to you that you cannot say 'pig' in Latin or Greek for the simple reason that there were no pigs in Greece or Rome. Now go back to your hotel and tell the clerk that you kidded a regular ball player."

The man who had sought to show up the great Oshkosh ball player turned crimson. He realized that he had met his master—at least, his master so far as repartee was concerned.



"I can lick you," he said finally.

The thin, aristocratic features of Harold Hangover became tinged in a [illegible] tint.

"You can lick who?" he demanded. In his rage he had forgotten to say "whom," and perhaps he might not have said it had he been placid and unruffled.

"I can lick you," repeated Mr. Faust, of Kansas. And then the trouble began.

Our hero was not much of a hand at fighting a cup of tea in one hand and a pie in the other, but what he didn't know about fighting wasn't worth the print paper on which to record it. With lightning jabs and vicious Sam Langford hooks, he drove the bewildered Faust from corner to corner. The latter was plainly concerned and was beginning to find the task of getting up an unkasme one indeed.

Little more remains to be told. The fight was soon over, and Harold Hangover had won.

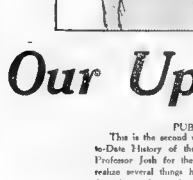
CHINA.

CHINA is one of our busiest little nations.

Although it has not gained in area since Fohi founded it, its population has increased from two (Mr. and Mrs. Fohi) to about four hundred and fifty millions.

And that is going some.



Of course, there are educated Chinamen to-day who insist the Chinese empire thrived 10,000 years ago. Possibly they are right. We have seen many Chinamen in our midst who certainly looked as old as that, if not older.

There are people who insist that Fohi and Noah were one and the same man. Perhaps that is so. At any rate, Noah landed on AaRAT.

The Chinese religion is the same as our religion—we both worship money.

Tea is popularly supposed to have first come from China. It is true the very best and the very worst tea is grown in that country We get our worst tea from that country. The poor, benighted hea then will not sell their best tea, they merely drink it.

An early Chinese Emperor was Rhaus. He used to go hunting through the young rice fields and trample down the rice. The natives fixed up a boat for him so it would fall apart, and when he was crossing from one field to another in the boat he was drowned, hence the well-know expression, "Rhaus . . . . . "

The Chinese wall is two thousand years old. At that time they had merely begun to talk about the New York subway.

Chinamen are full of anecdotes and hop. They do not believe a woman has a soul Collectively they are a wise people.

We are considerably different from the Chinamen. They put to death a banker who fails: we allow the failing banker to form a holding company and clean up a dozen more banks; a Chinese wife never questions her husband's goings and comings, his affinities or anything else, while if she is unfaithful he merely kills her and no comment is made. In this country if a man is unfaithful he has to pay alimony and court charges and seventy-eight other things, while if his wife is unfaithful all he gets is laughed at.

As you will see, dear reader, the Chinamen are a poor heathen race with nothing to commend them

The greatest of all Chinamen was Confucius. It was in 500 B. C. that he said: "Treat others just as you would wish them to treat you, and just as often."

Hats off to Confucius. He said all the religion there is in that sentence

CHAPTER V.

THE ARABS.

IT is said the "Arab folded his tent and silently stole away."

This cannot be verified, but up to the present moment there is nothing else the Arab has not stolen

Arabia is noted for its nights. There were one thousand and one of them and they were considerably warm, according to popular literature

In the year 570 Mohammed was born He was a camel driver, which places him in the class with the present-day taxi chauffeurs. He was a great profit—and had a method of flipping the meter attached to his camels that made his fares pay twice as much. As with the taxi chauffeurs of to-day, the people were sore on him and wanted to kill him, but he fled to the great city of Medina. Whenever the country yaps will not stand for a crook he can always mingle with the smart folks in a great city and trim them.

However, Mohammed got a strangle hold on a cult and made good. He wrote the Koran, invented prayer rugs, which were sold on the instalment plan, making him immensely wealthy, and he finally became so powerful and rich he was worshipped.

To this day there may be found now and then a person who worships power and riches.

Finally he died and was buried in a mosque, which is a place where they sell ice cream and souvenir post cards. It is said his coffin may still be seen suspended in mid air, thereby placing him in the foremost ranks of aviators for sustained flight.

The Arabs live in tents and travel about the deserts, where the heat is so terrific they have to pitch their tents in the middle of the day. From them we get the phrase "The heat is intense."

The last of the Caliphs was Moatasem. He used to wear a golden veil, because, he said, he was too good for the common people to look upon; but they captured him, put him in a leather bag and dragged him over the cobblestones until the bag was absolutely ruined by messing it up, and the Caliph was so humiliated at the mix-up that they had to bury him.

CHAPTER VI.

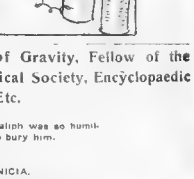
SYRIA AND PHOENICIA.

SYRIA was once the Ohio of the ancient East

No one could hope to become prominent in politics without first having the forethought to select Syrian parents

Syria has a serious history. It contains the greatest aggregation of ruins, both of cities and present population, of any three-by-four locality on the map outside of an old maid's home.

Antioch was one of the most noted cities in the world in the olden days when they threw Christians to the lions instead of jamming them into cars to hang on to straps.



Tadmor, called "Tadmor in the Desert" (because it was), was another great Syrian city. A gentleman named Solomon built it as a trading post for his merchants, who were engaged in collecting wives for him from all quarters of the globe.

Syria is a great country for "has been" cities. There were also Baalbec and Heliopolis, which was short for Hellometropolis.

Both of these cities, which flourished even before horse cars were known in New York, are now dead ones, there being more excitement right in Brooklyn at the present moment than in either of them

Phoenicia was some province in those days. It was called Phoenice for short by the inhabitants. It bordered on the Mediterranean Sea and contained some of the hottest burgs in history, not forgetting Tyre and Sidon, cities that would have worked Anthony Comstock to death in three weeks. But, regardless of the unsavory reputation of those cities, they never sold alleged humorous post cards.

Ptolemais was another Phoenician city. Lobster salad was invented there, followed by ptomaines, hence the name. It is said Cadmus, the Phoenician, invented books. As that was before the days of a man named Hughes it may be quite true that bookmakers thrived there.

EPICTETUS FORGOT TO SAY THAT--

Holmes Returns.

Burton Holmes, traveler, author and lecturer, is now in the United States after nearly seven months of foreign travel in search of material for his Travelogues for the coming season. His months of this time were spent in North America, the remainder being devoted to Spain and Portugal.

Scenic Temple.

South End Theatre.

The new South End Theatre, which is to open with the regular season, is nearing completion. The lower floor seats are being put in place, the boxes have been placed in position and the gallery is being finished. The stage is also nearing completion. The theatre will be an exhibition of new motion pictures.

Coronation Pictures.

The moving picture people are to be represented at the coronation of King George in June, 1911. Charles Urban, who has been in London for some time, has secured the exclusive rights for the moving picture photographing of the coronation ceremonies. He has also secured the exclusive rights for the photographing of the naval review at Spithead, which will be held in connection with the coronation ceremonies.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcement is made at the Shubert Theatre that the original Winter Garden company from the Winter Garden, New York, is the attraction beginning next Monday for a limited engagement of two weeks. As last year, some of the members of this famous organization, one of the local organizations that has been lauded but a few weeks ago.

"Miss Dudelsack" is the name of the latest Vienna opera that will be seen in America. In addition to this there is an all star cast of a number of well known comedy stars including Willie Howard. This will be the first time the piece will be given to the Boston theatre on October 16.

The Authors' Producing Company, a new organization with a wealth of backing theatrical producers and authors, is behind the offering that will present for the first time in Boston at the Hollis Street Theatre, on Monday evening, September 25, the comedy success, "The Price," by George Broadhurst.

ONE OF THE GREAT CARVED STONES AT THE DOORWAY OF THE "TEMPLE OF THE TIGERS" AT MYSTERIOUS CHICHEN ITZA

MR. W. D. PARMELEE, of Harvard University, has just returned to the United States after a perilous trip of exploration among some of the mysterious buried cities of Yucatan

He was accompanied by only one white companion and six Indians, who were employed to cut away the tropical growth that covers the ancient ruins and bars the way to them

Mr. Parmelee visited two of the greatest centres of the old Mayan civilization, which, having first fallen into the hands of the Aztecs, was swept away by the cruel and barbarous Spaniards four hundred years ago.

The objective point was Tulumne, a rich centre of the old Yucatan culture. But they also made a brief exploration of the great city of Chichen-Itza, the holy city of the Mayans, where the great god Kukulkan, the Feathered Serpent, was worshipped. In Chichen-Itza is a great pool with limestone walls and a depth of water of seventy feet, into this pool were cast thousands of men and women, sacrificed to the Feathered Serpent

The pool, or senote, has never been thoroughly examined, but its bottom must be scores of feet deep with bones of the sacrifices and with the treasure with which these hapless victims were loaded before being cast into the sacred lake

It is likely that as a result of Mr Parmelee's investigations a modern dredge will be taken to Chichen Itza and the ancient sacrificial lake will be pumped of its tons of treasure

Because of danger from tribes of Indians who live in this section and who visit the most barbaric tortures upon all white men whom they catch, Mr. Parmelee and his companion suddenly cut short their visit

Here Mr. Parmelee tells of this wonderful buried city of Chichen-Itza, its sacrifices and the treasure which the senote hides

S[illegible] Maya [illegible] are forming a mosaic which depicts a civilization that for picturesque, barbaric splendor and ferocity has never been approached even by the ancient Greeks, Romans or Egyptians.

Among the hundreds of ruined buildings which dot nearly every field and jungle of Yucatan the group which contains the greatest number of edifices and which is perhaps better known than the rest is the one called Chichen Itza, located in the northern central part of the peninsula. This ancient city, erected and in ruins hundreds of years before the Spaniards set foot on the American continent, has been the scene of recent archæological activities, the results of which bid new and surprising lights on Mayan life of over a thousand years ago

This great group of ruins, the centre of an immense population, which extended from the present village of Tatas, fifteen miles to the north, to an unnamed group of buildings [illegible] distant to the south, dates from about [illegible] A. D., and was probably inhabited until three or four hundred years before the coming of the Spaniards. The principal temples still standing are more than a dozen in number, and it was here that the ancient Mayas had their main astronomical observatories, sacrificial tem-

Will This Win the South Pole?

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY A. FIALA

THE Scott Polar Expedition, for which five years of preparation have been made, is now under way. As he sails from Australia Dr. Douglas Mawson, the Australian explorer, who is also a dash for the Pole will employ a unique type of airship, a combination balloon and aeroplane.

[illegible] Robert F. Scott [illegible] Wilhelm Filchner, [illegible] motor-sledges, [illegible] especially for [illegible] Japanese, [illegible] Norwegian [illegible] Arctic [illegible] Mawson [illegible] has a distinct advantage over his rivals, and that, although his expedition is the last to start, it will reach the coveted goal first.

The [illegible] genius [illegible] combined. The combination is not as speedy as the aeroplane alone would be, but, naturally, has greater carrying power, while, on the other hand [illegible] contrary currents [illegible].

The [illegible] is known as Mawson's Antarctic Motor Balloon-Aeroplane. It is a dirigible and aeroplane combined. The combination is not as speedy as the aeroplane alone would be, but, naturally, has greater carrying power, while, on the other hand [illegible] contrary currents [illegible].

The [illegible] is known as Mawson's Antarctic Motor Balloon-Aeroplane. It is a dirigible and aeroplane combined. The combination is not as speedy as the aeroplane alone would be, but, naturally, has greater carrying power, while, on the other hand [illegible] contrary currents [illegible].

The dirigible is so much lighter than the air [illegible] which [illegible] heavier than the most perfect equilibrium is established and maintained, the lifting power of the aeroplane [illegible] keeping the [illegible] at the South Pole are very different to those described by Commander Peary as existing at the North Pole. Formidable hummocks and icy barriers make progress almost impossible in the Antarctic regions, and even the motor-sledges, with which Captain Scott and Dr. Filchner are equipped, may not be able to make their way over these difficult conditions. Such conditions as these, however, naturally prove no impediment to an airship, and unless Dr. Mawson encounters other unexpected difficulties there seems to be no reason why he should not reach the Pole [illegible] days of travel.

What will be the [illegible] the South Pole?

From what Lieutenant Shackleton and other Antarctic explorers have reported, it is known that such animate life as exists in these [illegible] is altogether different to anything with which we are familiar [illegible] found consists of lichen and moss of a very low type, while animal life is represented principally by the penguin, the seal and killer whale [illegible] than [illegible] and it is [illegible] of these [illegible] may be [illegible] of the [illegible] that [illegible] than [illegible].

Outside of the mollusca, the penguin of the Antarctic presents the nearest resemblance to man among the lower order of animals. It is a bird of unusual intelligence, and shows the same capacity for social and communal life that distinguishes the ant among insects.

To reach the summit of slippery ice-hills these clever birds build mounds of snow which they utilize to prevent themselves from slipping while making an ascent. In the handling and care of their young, they exhibit almost [illegible] in many other respects they [illegible] some degree the trait not existing among the natives of the Antarctic region that they are closely related to an even more highly advanced species of animals believed to exist in the neighborhood of the Pole itself, whose civilization approaches very close to that of [illegible].

For this reason the wanton destruction of these intelligent birds by cruel and brutal sailors and adventurers to the Antartic coasts must be too vigorously condemned. Thousands of them are killed every year for the sport the slaughter affords although as the poor creatures are unable to put up any effective resistance, no true sportsman would seem to engage in such [illegible].

To-day [illegible] Polar [illegible] reveal types further advanced than the penguin remains to be seen, but it looks as if Dr. Mawson in his dirigible-aeroplane may be the first to witness whatever the region holds in store.

It was a lovely night [illegible] for the clock had long since struck [illegible]

Sailor lads, Indian squaws, Spanish dancers, French dancers, pink [illegible] Turk[illegible] maids were dancing, prancing [illegible] ballroom. The Burke-Roche Twins [illegible] Parrots, were aching because [illegible] occasionally stopped.

The future Lady Clamoss, the beautiful Miss Sherman, as an Italian singer, was dancing with a fierce-looking Turk. Mrs. Robert Goelet, as a Grecian dancing girl was trying to find her husband, who was disguised as a clown.

Suddenly the bold Harry appeared on the scene. He was a dick of a Pierrot; he stood the lovely Mrs. Dick stevens as the Sun Lady. He coldly ignored Mrs. McEvers Little, who was an exquisite Nanon. At last he found her! Who? The lady in mauve gauze who had given him a superb ring in a moment of forgetfulness!

These things and more occurred right under the eyes of jealous husbands! Under the eyes of even more jealous bachelors but no one knew that outsiders were in, and anything goes so long as one is an insider!

A green and red monkey (trimmed with bangles and a Teddy Bear cane dancing down the veranda. Tom Slidell was the Monkey and Herbert Harriman the Teddy Bear. There were looking for someone or something. They broke up the balcony scene, and watched the interesting rime scene.

The outsiders began to get her eye.

It was 5 o'clock. A number of conservative couples went home. Some of the others went, too.

At 6 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Thomas went home. But who cared? Monroe Robinson, Tom Slidell, the Pierce brothers and Louis Bergueres were left. And plenty of like spirits remained.

Dancing is thirsty work. But there was no need to feel dreadfully thirsty. The whole ocean was at the very doors.

Six o'clock! Birds are singing in the trees. A Sabbath calm pervades Newport.

Dick, the [illegible] Whitney and even floating across [illegible] and looked [illegible] Out from the Golf Club pours a stream of wild, weird people. They stopped at Quarterfoll, the Thomas place, and serenaded them. In order to get any peace Thomases had to get up and give them an early breakfast.

They then went over to the William Earl Dodges, serenaded them, and fared much worse! Quite icy water and iced looks came from the lodge people.

THE LOST TEAR OF BUDDHA

How This "Holy Pearl" of Buddhist Legends Is at Last to Be Rescued from Its Octopus-Guarded Ocean Cavern by Rich Women Converts in the Paris Smart Set

Pearl Merchants of Ceylon Watching the Opening of a Cargo of Pearl Oysters.

NOW when the Lord Buddha had fasted for seven days and had remained under the bo tree all night in deep meditation, his last earthly desires passed from him; but when he had cast from him even his family name, Siddhartha Gautama, and thought for the last time of his beautiful young wife, Yasochara, and his infant son, a single tear dropped from his eye, and, ere it touched the ground, became a pearl of price, the treasured future emblem of the spiritual authority of the Lord Buddha.

Such is the legend of Gautama Buddha submarine cave—but, alas! that it is safely guarded from human hands by the devil in the shape of an enormous octopus, which makes its home in that cave.

Legendary accounts have it that the pearl in its casket was thrown overboard by missionary disciples of Gautama Buddha to save it from the hands of Malayan infidels by whom they were pursued and slain all but one survivor.

The expedition being organized for the purpose of recovering this pearl—known as "Buddha's Tear"—is promoted by a choice circle of [illegible] converts to that religion. Those include Mme. Catulle Mendes, [illegible] of the celebrated poet, Mme. Maeterlinck, wife of the poet-dramatist, the Countess de Plata, and even members of the Parisian American colony as Mrs. John Munroe, Mrs. Robert Van Wyck, Mrs. Clinch Smith, Mrs. Henry Bispham, Mrs. Gerry and her father, of Chicago, and Mrs. Jack Sloanaker, of New York.

All these ladies are ardent Buddhists, with wondrous plans for a Buddhist temple in the outskirts of Paris. They hold regular meetings at various homes, at which [illegible] and recite passages from sacred books impressively in unison.

They have steeped themselves in the [illegible] of Buddha, reciting their catechism to Hindu Swamis and receiving [illegible] instruction. Especially in the homes of Mrs. Munroe, Mrs. Clinch Smith and Mrs. Van Wyck are these dusky instructors welcome.

But it is the widow of Catulle Mendes who is really the focus of this circle, owing to her possession of a wonderful statue of Gautama Buddha, which represents him at the end of the fast which prepared him for his great mission—in fact, as Buddha answered when he shed a tear which was transformed into a pearl.

[illegible] Buddha emaciated and meditative, and with [illegible] open and [illegible] which they are [illegible] viewed. This feature of the statue is accepted as miraculously verifying the legend about "Buddha's Tear." Mme. Mendes and her [illegible] firmly believe that when the [illegible] pearl is recovered and presented before the statue those wonderful eyes will give a sign of recognition. They anticipate that this miracle will do more for the spread of the Buddhistic belief than all the ordinary missionary efforts possible to put forth.

There is no lack of means wherewith to prosecute the search for and the recovery of "Buddha's Tear." A large steam yacht will be fitted out with divers and diving apparatus, besides luxurious accommodations for [illegible] at the head of the enterprise, and for two or three of the Hindu teachers whose assertion will make their authority supreme with the pearl [illegible] to locate the submarine cavern where the porphyry casket is.

Mme. Catulle Mendes, Leader of the Paris Converts to Buddhism.

Mme. Catulle Mendes's Image of the Fasting Buddha, Whose Eyes Appear to Open and Close.

The yacht will also be supplied with means of dragging to the surface and giving his quietus to the great octopus that makes its home in the cavern of the pearl. That, indeed, will be the first object of the expedition, for it is appreciated that not until the devil fish guardian of the relic is publicly dispatched will it be possible to induce native divers to attempt the pearl's recovery.

Most newspaper readers will be inclined to look upon this enterprise as the apotheosis of the fantastic. But they should take into consideration the extent to which its fair instigators have steeped themselves in Buddhism and in the innumerable legends surrounding the life of Siddhartha Gautama. Also the influence of the constant teachings of their native teachers, whose fanaticism is really hypnotic. Besides, such a quest is not much more fantastic than that of King Arthur's knights for the Holy Grail—which is supposed to have been found beneath the walls of Glastonbury Abbey.

When, at the age of more than forty-five years, one of the wives Mahamaya—miraculously gave birth to a son, the pious sages of Benares predicted that the infant would become a prophet to restore a degenerated people to their ancient state of virtuous spirituality.

But the young prince—Siddhartha Gautama, he was named—chose a life of elegant luxury. Until his beautiful and beloved wife, Yasodhara, presented him with an infant son he did not even surmise that there were such things as poverty and misery in the world. Then, one day, he was enlightened. His thoughtless charioteer drove through a street in which the prince was shocked to see a man utterly broken down by age.

A month later, while still saddened by that sight, he saw another man suffering from a loathsome disease. These new experiences set the luxurious prince to meditating deeply. And when, a few months later, his eyes rested upon the horrible spectacle of a decomposing human corpse he was moved to leave his palace, his loved wife, his infant son and every luxury he had become accustomed to and flee to the wilderness, governed by one passion—to purge himself of all earthly desires and become a Buddha—which means one enlightened.

Although tempted by the devil as Christ was—he persevered and won the battle. It was his last trace of regret for his wife and son that proved his victory by being instantly transformed into a pearl.

While Gautama Buddha lived, the miraculous pearl was guarded secretly by his nearest disciples. After his death these disciples became missionaries, propagating the new faith in distant parts. They went down the Ganges making converts. The whole of northern India yielded to Buddhism. Temples were built, and in the great temple at Benares rested "Buddha's Tear" in its carved casket of porphyry, most precious of relics.

Centuries rolled by. There came a time when, in Ceylon and on the Malay Peninsula, the natives, persisted the efforts of Buddha's missionaries that miraculous intervention was deemed necessary to their conversion. For this purpose "Buddha's Tear," in its casket, was carried to that region. But sight of the miraculous pearl only excited the cupidity of the natives. The missionaries fled in a ship to preserve their priceless treasure. They were pursued in another ship and were able to save the pearl from desecration by throwing it overboard, as above related.

Few legends are as fascinating as is this one concerning "Buddha's Tear." If the Paris expedition headed by the Countess de Plata and Mme. Mendes succeeds in recovering it from its octopus-guarded ocean cavern, they calculate that they will have advanced the cause of Buddhism all over the world far further than another century of ordinary missionary work could possibly accomplish.

OUR NEWEST WAR TERRORS

"Scatter-Shells" That Spread a Rain of Death,

Flying Machines That Swing Bomb-Laden Tentacles Over the Battleships, "Cuttle-Fish" Projectiles, Gyroscopic Torpedoes!

By Rene Bache.

PEACE suits Uncle Sam first rate, but he is none the less ready to fight if there should be an occasion. At this very time the United States Government is busily engaged in all sorts of war preparation, and some of the most startling novelties in the art of [illegible] are being tested.

Not the least [illegible] the latest [illegible] in war, most of the new terrors are designed either to help [illegible] deadly work or to [illegible] be way of the air.

The United States Government has a very powerful explosive of its own. It is called "Dynnite" because it is the invention of Lieutenant-Colonel Beverly W. Dunn, U. S. A. It is most innocent in appearance and looks like ordinary yellow mustard.

"Dynnite" is used, among other purposes, for charging the explosive shells used by the aeroplane gun which are so new and startling a feature of aeroplance [illegible] Such a gun is also [illegible] which has just been built at [illegible] Island Arsenal as an [illegible] experiment. It has a shell [illegible] ranges of seven miles. It was shipped to the Panama Canal [illegible] Hook near New York [illegible] experimental [illegible] and box kite. It [illegible] weapon is [illegible] "torpedo" [illegible] weighing [illegible] propelled [illegible]. The [illegible] portion contains [illegible] are thrown violently out in the form of an expanding cone when the shell bursts. This cone of death is supposed to envelope the plane.

Meanwhile, however, the navy has built an aeroplane gun of its own which it considers altogether superior. It fires [illegible] "scatter shells," as they are called, which, when they burst, throw the bullets in all directions. Each of these cylindro-conical shells is three inches in diameter, weighs thirteen pounds, and contains an explosive charge of five pounds of dunnite. The projectile carries a fuse on its nose, which the firing of the gun automatically sets off, by means of a plunger and cap device—the fuse being fixed for any desired number of seconds by adjusting a small dial device.

It is of extreme importance to be able to watch the course of the shells fired from an aeroplane gun [illegible] unless the flying machine be hit, there would be no means of knowing how near the projectile went to the target and [illegible] could not be corrected for [illegible] this account [illegible] and rather curious device called a tracer has been adopted.

The tracer is a small cylinder of metal attached to the base of the projectile and [illegible] an inflammable substance of such character that when [illegible] it leaves a trail of sparks [illegible] as much as flying [illegible] balloons. In the reconstruction of the development of naval warfare it is not likely to undertake operations in the night time. When the gun is fired the projectile may turn in the cylinder is started to burning automatically.

When such a machine is to be used on a [illegible] for attacking the enemy's fleet it will be equipped with a reel holding from five to ten thousand feet of fine, strong wire. A weight of sufficient pulling power to keep this wire taut is fastened to the end, and about forty feet above the weight a shell is suspended.

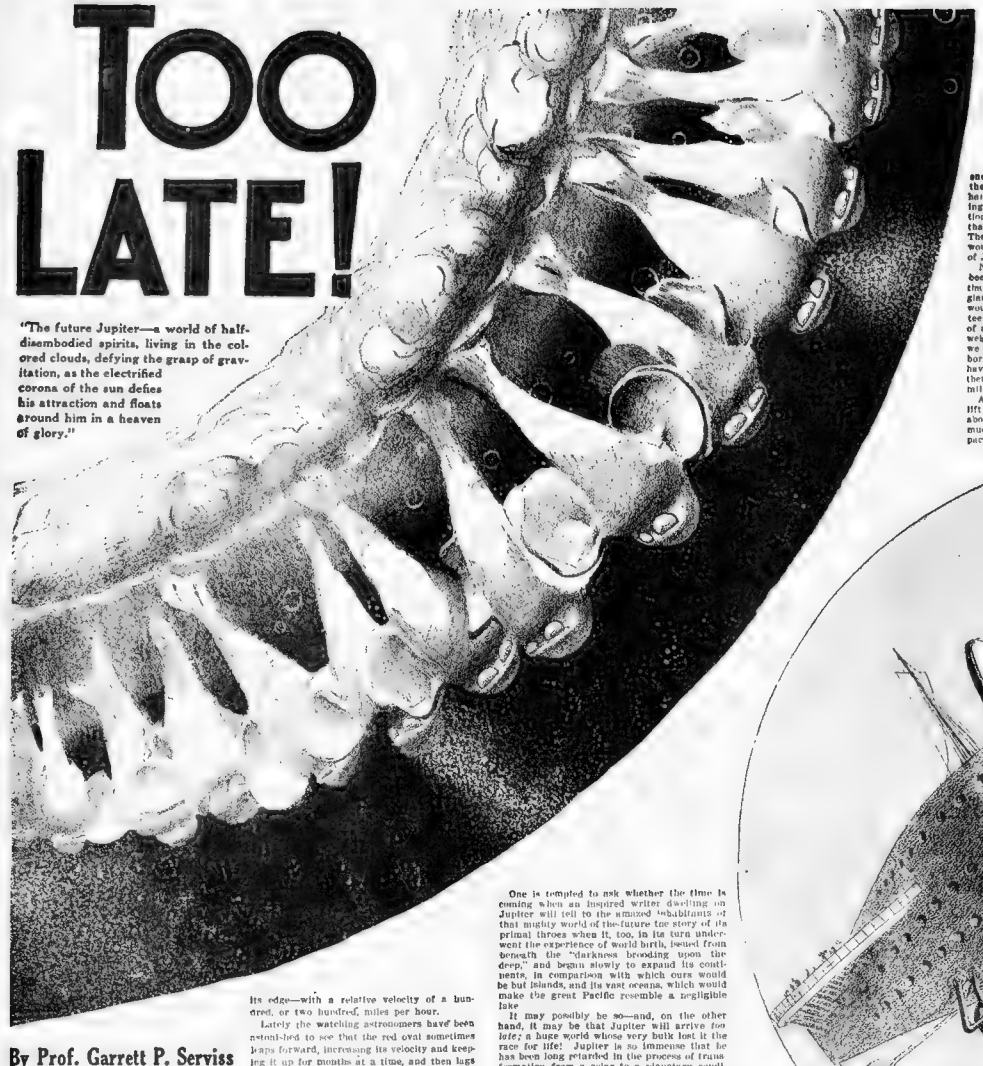
Before the aviator leaves the shore he will know the approximate position of the enemy. After [illegible] far enough to be sure [illegible] a friendly vessel he sets down his trailer until the end [illegible] skims along the surface of the water. Then he flies back and forth over the supposed location of the ships he is trying to damage, continually changing his route so as to cover as wide a territory as possible. Eventually the trailer will come in contact with some part of the enemy's fleet, and as soon as it does strike an obstacle the suspended shell is automatically released and plunges downward, hitting the deck or the water near by. In either event the shell explodes [illegible] the explosion is supposed [illegible] an important part [illegible] [illegible] It is designed not [illegible] but for [illegible] [illegible] is a three-shell [illegible] [illegible] explodes the charges [illegible] and their combustion generates enormous quantity of dense smoke which completely envelopes everything in its vicinity. It [illegible] a continuous fire of [illegible] supposed [illegible] of [illegible] cases [illegible] around them [illegible] [illegible] of officers and gunners and [illegible] [illegible] their efforts at [illegible].

One of the most remarkable features of our war [illegible] had to do with dirigible [illegible] torpedoes. The up-to-date [illegible] of this type is considerably [illegible] than the style of a few years ago. The largest being increased from eighteen to twenty-one [illegible] is fifteen feet long, and is [illegible] in tenis and purposes a submarine boat in miniature.

Such a torpedo is a steel cylinder with a conical nose, the latter called the "war head," being filled with a powerful high explosive. The main body of the cylinder is an air chamber, holding [illegible] of air under great pressure. The air pressure runs the [illegible] motor in the rear part of the [illegible], actuating a propeller.

The up to date torpedo, when discharged from its tube runs at a speed of over [illegible] miles an hour. It has a gyroscope [illegible] and is discharged at a target with as much accuracy as a rifle ball from a rifle gun. Travelling at a depth of about [illegible] feet [illegible] of the water [illegible] beneath the armor of a warship it is kept automatically at that depth by an ingenious little [illegible] which turns up if its nose attempts to point downward, or vice versa. Instead of a gyroscope, which is started running at [illegible] at the target before the torpedo is launched. Then if the torpedo tends to veer to right or left, it is brought back [illegible] course by [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TOO LATE!



"The future Jupiter—a world of half-disembodied spirits, living in the colored clouds, defying the grasp of gravitation, as the electrified corona of the sun defies his attraction and floats around him in a heaven of glory."

The Stupendous T of the Planet Now in the Birth of Its First Co

incrusted with a rocky shell. If we suppose the diameter of the planet to be reduced to one-half its present amount in the process of cooling down and contracting, the force of gravitating on its surface will be increased to more than ten times that on the earth's surface. Then a being weighing 200 pounds on the earth would weigh a ton on the new-created world of Jupiter.

Now, using the same argument which has been employed by Lowell and others to show that the inhabitants of Mars are probably giants because the force of gravitation on Mars would permit them to attain a height of fourteen or fifteen feet without discomfort or loss of activity on account of their small relative weight and applying the argument inversely we see that the inhabitants of the new Jupiter born out of chaos would, for a similar reason, have to be very small. Instead of six-foot men, there would be pigmies only about seven inches tall!

An elephant of the largest size there would lift his Jovian shoulders a foot and a half above the soil, and no doubt would cause as much astonishment by his bulk as a fifteen-foot pachyderm does on the earth. The same reasoning has been applied to calculate the size of the vegetation of Mars, and roughly we can see it, inversely, for Jupiter. A tree thirty or forty feet high would be the marvel of the planet. Grass would average five or six inches in length; they would be amply sufficient to conceal the ferocious proclivities of the five-toed cows. Made of such tiny timber as would be the houses could hardly exceed four feet in height, even when they have full stories, but a full down a stairway would be as likely to prove as one down a ten foot stairway on

But the numbers of the population would be enormous. Even with its diameter only half, Jupiter would still have a surface thirty times that of the earth, and its plains and oceans, if similarly proportioned would be each thirty times greater than ours. The mountains would be [illegible] most inexistent to our [illegible] the general appearance presented by the planet to a visitor from the earth would be that of a boundless plain, dotted with trees and small bushes in size, and with toy animals covered with a swarming population pointed whose still w velop for million

One is compelled to ask whether the time is coming when an inspired writer dwelling on Jupiter will tell to the amazed inhabitants of that mighty world of the future the story of its primal throes when it, too, in its turn underwent the experience of world birth, issued from beneath the "darkness brooding upon the deep," and began slowly to expand its continents, in comparison with which ours would be but islands, and its vast oceans, which would make the great Pacific resemble a negligible lake.

It may possibly be so—and, on the other hand, it may be that Jupiter will arrive too late; a huge world whose very bulk lost it the race for life! Jupiter is so immense that he has been long retarded in the process of transformation from a solar to a planetary condition, and is now so far behind that perhaps the sun, the father and maintainer of all life, will have fallen into pale decrepitude before the stupendous changes indicated by such phenomena as the glowing oval have progressed far enough to turn Jupiter into a habitable globe. If that be the case, then his vast lands of the far future may be but frozen deserts, while his enormous seas, if enough internal heat remains to keep them liquid, will roll under the starlight without a token of animation in their black profundities, or on their faintly gleaming billows—breaking on lifeless coasts unthrown with shells, and resounding over empty spaces where there are no ears to hear and no eyes to see.

But even if the sun should not fail during the immense lapse of time which must intervene before the creative forces have shaped Jupiter into a rigid globe, it may be that it would not give sufficient light, heat and other forms of radiation, at the distance of almost five hundred million miles, to nourish any of the higher forms of life. As things now are we know that Jupiter receives only one-twenty-fifth as much light and heat from the sun as the earth gets. Changed into a habitable globe it could not itself supply its own wants in this respect, for while it was yet hot it would be uninhabitable.

But all this proceeds upon the assumption that we know everything about life—which we do not. We only know life as we find it on the earth. It is, then, at least supposable that being of a high order of organization might exist under conditions natural to them, although differing widely from those prevailing on the earth and regarded by us as indispensable. Let us, then, inquire, on the basis of the little we do know about Jupiter, into the possibilities of its future, the curtain of which is being slowly lifted even by such enigmatical phenomena as the great red oval.

While Jupiter is 1,300 times more bulky than the earth, it is only about 317 times heavier, which means that its average density is only a quarter that of the earth. With the exception of the red oval, and perhaps a few other curious spots which make their appearance from time to time, all that we can see of Jupiter seems to be plainly in a vaporous state. It does not follow, however, that below the visible surface there may not be solid or liquid matter. Still it appears likely that any rigid material which may exist there is relatively light, as compared with the rocks of the earth and is most probably in a viscid state, kept thus by the internal heat.

As it cools off the great force of Jupiter's gravitation, amounting now at its surface to 2.64 times the force of the earth's attraction at the earth's surface, must tend to increase the interior density, and it may eventually become

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

SOMETHING of tremendous import is just now going on in the world of Jupiter, and astronomers are watching the spectacle with the [illegible] another what it can [illegible]

If the whole mighty continent of Asia, with Russia in Europe thrown in to make up the balance, should become fused by internal fires until [illegible] ocean in a furnace, plain and [illegible] together, blushing with ruddy heat, while all the rest of the earth was buried in huge clouds, surging out into vast bands of white [illegible] by the rotation of the planet on its [illegible] into spinning cyclones and [illegible] by the heat—then the appearance of our world as seen from the moon would probably bear no slight resemblance to the [illegible] Jupiter now presents when viewed with a telescope.

In the southern hemisphere of that planet a huge red oval, whose color, when not obscured by clouds drifting over it, is strikingly reminiscent of a look by night into the throat of a living volcano, has lately become the centre of interest for all who possess powerful telescopes. Tak[illegible] [illegible] covers an area of not less than, say, 1 and forty million square miles. [illegible] it is forty-five square miles greater in extent than the whole surface of the earth! It reddens with its ominous hue about a hundredth of the prodigious surface of Jupiter himself.

More wonderful still than its color are its motions, and its strange effect upon the neighboring parts of the great planet. At the near the border of a huge band of dark vapors, thousands of miles broad, which is known to astronomers as "Jupiter's South Belt." This great belt bends away from the glowing oval as if some mysterious repulsive force acted upon it. The consequence is that a gigantic oval[illegible], or hollow, has been formed in the south belt, thousands of miles deep and thirty or forty thousand miles long. The effect is like what one might imagine to be produced by the wind from a tremendous conflagration driving away the black clouds hovering about it. The relatively narrow band separating the oval spot from the belt gleams with a wide radiance as if it were molten metal pouring from a furnace spout.

The motions of the oval itself are not less mysterious. It goes round with the swift rotation of the planet, which occupies only about ten hours, but it does not move as rapidly as the clouds of the south belt, which go pouring past it, at the same time bending away from its edge—with a relative velocity of a hundred, or two hundred, miles per hour.

Lately the watching astronomers have been astonished to see that the red oval sometimes leaps forward, increasing its velocity and keeping it up for months at a time, and then lags behind again during other months. At the same time curious changes take place in its appearance. For long periods it will be almost invisible, being apparently covered with gray vapors, only its edges remaining distinctly visible in the form of an ellipse; then it will brighten again, as if the fire had regained the mastery, or a mighty wind had blown off the clouds.

This increase of brightness was very marked recently, when the oval resumed the fiery appearance that it had in 1878, a year after its first apparition.

It is no wonder that astronomers are puzzled by this strange phenomenon. What, indeed, can it be?

One answer may be given offhand. Whatever that strange object may be in reality—a continent new born from fiery chaos; a mass of condensed, superheated clouds; a fiery lake 30,000 miles long; a glowing slag, as large as the earth, floating in incandescent fluid—there is not the least doubt that it is a token of evolution.

Practically, on the earth, we know evolution only in its gentler aspects, proceeding by steps requiring centuries to the gradual transformation of animals and plants into new and varied species.

But on Jupiter we behold it seizing with titanic force upon a whole world; shaping it by an awful birth out of chaos; moulding it with fire, in the pit less hand of demiurgic power! The little earth passed through all these things ages ago, and has forgotten them in the flow of aeons. It remembers them no more than the child in the bloom of expanding life remembers the first cry, which, for all that we can tell, may be the expression of a suffering more intense than any that the most fearful death can inflict—the dreadful pang of awakening life!

That is the experience through which Jupiter is passing. From a chaotic mass, "instinct with fire and nitre," it is being changed into a globe of a more advanced organization. The flame of chemical combination is coursing through all its veins, and the "Great Red Spot," which now excites so much astonishment among beholders four or five hundred million miles away, is merely one of the outward indications of the terrific changes going on within. When we think of it rightly, this is the most stupendous and transcendently terrible spectacle that was ever enacted before human eyes! It is a scene recalling that depicted, with words of awe, in Genesis—but magnified more than a thousand-fold, for it would take 1,300 earths to equal the prodigious bulk of Jupiter.

How Planet Jupiter

THE enormous mass of the planet Jupiter, together with its commanding situation in the more distant portion of the solar system, makes it the great pro-consul governing the province of comets in the sun's empire. Astronomers would know very little about comets but for Jupiter. The reason is that its great attractive power enables it to control the motions of wandering comets coming within its sphere, and to turn them into closed orbits, having the sun in one focus of the ellipse.

The vast majority of all the comets that are called periodical belong to what is known as Jupiter's family. They do not circle around Jupiter—he is not powerful enough for that, great as he is—but by his influence they are compelled to circle regularly around the sun. The way in which Jupiter exercises this wonderful power over comets may be illustrated by means of the accompanying diagram.

The Belted and Oblold Planet Jupiter, Showing in the Centre the "Red Spot," Which Is the Beginning of a Phase Through Which Earth Went Millions of Years Ago.

We see by the diagram that when the approaching comet has arrived at the point where it is shown with its tail it is quite close to Jupiter, who has been coming up along his orbit in the direction indicated by the arrow. The attraction of the great planet now begins seriously to affect the comet, and

By Prof. J. V. Marchand, Of the Sorbonne, Paris.

WHAT will man do when our earth becomes uninhabitable? This problem has already come under the consideration of practical science and a hypothetical answer to it has been furnished.

In the first place we must understand that the present age of the earth has been calculated with substantial accuracy. It has been calculated from the time necessary to produce the salinity of the oceans, from that necessary to produce the sedimentary deposits in the oceans and from that necessary to produce the existing amount of helium from radio-active substances. M. Henri Becquerel, Sir William Ramsay, Dr Rutherford and other famous scientists have taken part in these calculations. The result obtained is a thousand million years. That must be regarded as substantially correct.

Having established the present age of the earth the next logical step is to calculate the period of time during which it will continue to be habitable by man. To the non-public this calculation is even more interesting. It has been made by the scientists already mentioned, with the assistance of the calculations of the great German physicist, Dr. Kelvin.

At present the only satisfactory means of calculating the future life of the earth is by the contraction and diminution in temperature of the sun, our only source of life and heat. From exact observations it has been calculated that the sun will have lost one-fourth of its volume in seventeen million years. Long before this the average temperature of the earth will have been reduced to zero, through the diminution of the heat of the sun. Even before this life on the earth will have become impossible for man, and for all creatures except some microbian forms.

It has been estimated that the maximum period during which man can exist on earth is six million years. Call it sixty thousand centuries to help you to realise its full value.

Man will then have to leave the frozen earth or cease to exist. It is not conceivable that all the achievements of the human mind are to end in nothing. Much may be done in sixty thousand centuries. When we recall that all the wonders of electricity, wireless telegraphy and aviation are but discoveries of yesterday, we can form some idea of the progress that will be made in sixty thousand centuries.

To aviation especially we must look for our release from the uninhabitable earth. Surely this science, a creation of the last ten years, will have reached an enormous development by that time. There is nothing theoretically impossible in flight through interplanetary space. That is the problem which the science of the future will have to solve.

Science has found recently that light has a great propulsive power, defying under certain conditions the force of gravitation. It is suggested that the future flying machine for interplanetary travelling may be propelled by the light of the sun. In this connection it is curious to note that a flying machine has already been constructed, to be driven by the light of the sun, which is gathered in by two enormous eyes

A Diagram Illustrating How the Attraction of Jupiter Captures Comets, Forcing Them to Describe Their Permanent Orbit Around Him.

"If evolution on Jupiter took the same course it did on earth, the force of gravitation would make mankind seven inches tall instead of six feet. An elephant then would lift his shoulders a foot and a half above the soil."

We can forecast the day when the population of the earth will have its frozen abode in one vast flight under the guidance of aviators. The sun itself will then still be too hot for a dweller upon it, and the first stop will be made on Venus, which is twenty-six million miles from the earth and by that much nearer the sun.

Its temperature is at present too high for human life, but will be reduced to a suitable point in six million years. It is a beautiful planet, with a fine atmosphere, and mountains twenty-seven miles high, which will obviously be of great advantage to a population devoted to aviation.

After a short period on Venus it will be necessary for it to move again. The second migration will be to Mercury, which is only thirty-six million miles from the sun, the nearest to it of all the planets.

Finally the great migration to the sun itself will have to be made. By that time the refrigeration of the sun will have progressed to such a point that it will no longer yield direct light. It will be necessary for man to produce all his light by some artificial means, either by electricity or by digging down into the interior of the sun, or in some other way yet to be devised.

It is not difficult to imagine that man when living on the cool, dark sun will construct vast pits into the molten interior. The light thus unveiled will be caught by gigantic reflectors and distributed over the surface of the sun. Heat will be obtained in the same way. All the problems of living will then be under the exact control of science.

Crops will be grown by heat drawn by man from the interior, and light similarly regulated by him. There will be no seasons, no uncertainties of weather to make life difficult and uncomfortable. Night and day, if desired, will be furnished by the community.

People will spend most of their time delightfully in flying machines flitting through an atmosphere absolutely free from germs and developing the highest powers of the mind.

Eventually man will have to leave the sun, too, for it will become frigid in time. The flying machines will then be called upon to carry the race upon a greater migration than ever, a migration to one of the constellations where there is another sun in full vigor. The prospect is endless.

But, then, the visitor would be overwhelmed by his own weight, for if he weighed 150 pounds at home he would weigh 1,500 pounds on Jupiter, and so would probably become the prey, or the plaything, of the little Jovian, because he could not lift his own hand to defend himself.

Still, the room that there would be! There might be millions of millions of the seven-inch people dwelling on the smallest continent. What a spectacle their armies would present! A thousand million little soldiers, marching in countless columns, armed with guns of the size of a pocket buttonhook, with bayonets like needle points, or making a wild charge on the backs of horses six inches tall! A Jovian Napoleon would kill his million men a day, with bullets smaller than bird shot, and finally sleep in a marble sarcophagus a foot long, which would seem to his survivors a gigantic tomb worthy of his fame.

But all these things would be seriously affected by the immense distance of the sun. Nearly five hundred million miles away, it would be but a faint image of the "god of day" that we know. Its heat would not suffice to produce what we would call a habitable climate, unless the great density of the air counteracted the effects of the rarefied radiation. This might, indeed, be the case, for the Jovian atmosphere would be exceedingly heavy.

If the Jovian inhabitants were constituted of materials of slight density they would be able to maintain themselves in the air more easily than we can do. Thus Jupiter would be an avian world—the paradise of intellectual birds.

Returning to the question of surface habitation, there would be no chance for astronomy on such a planet. The revolving powers of the Jovian would be as the size, and consequently, instead of a 100-inch mirror, we should have to be content with a 10-inch, as the strength of penetration of the instrument would be reduced by the majority of their glasses, if modified after ours, could be only one or two inches in diameter. What could they see with their minute eyes, gathering so little light? The fainter stars would probably be forever invisible to them, and they would know nothing of the mysteries and wonders of the nebulae. The ideal place for astronomers is on a little planet, whose eyes, natural and artificial, may be of giant size.

It will be observed that most of what we have said is predicated upon the assumption that the inhabitants of Jupiter would, after all, resemble those of the earth, except in size.

There is no solid ground for such an assumption, although it has been gravely made in the case of Mars. It would be far more logical to suppose that such inhabitants must be organized in consonance with the environment in which they would find themselves. It is not likely that they would resemble men, or any terrestrial creatures, at all. But whatever their form and make might be, there is no getting round the proposition that they would have to face the consequences of the great relative force of gravitation on their planet, and it is difficult to see how they could be as bulky as those of the earth unless they were formed of different substance.

As to the matter of intelligence, except we adopt a purely materialistic hypothesis, making the mind and soul simply effects of a complicated combination of brain cells, there is no apparent reason why intellect might not be manifested by a very small as well as by a very large creature. But of course, the physical effects which it could produce would be limited by the powers of the body that was given to it.

If, in consequence of the impediments introduced by the immense force of gravitation, the inhabitants of the future Jupiter could not possess a physical make-up resembling ours, we may imagine that they would be constituted of more impenderable substances—half disembodied spirits, defying the grasp of gravitation as the electrified corona of the sun defies his attraction and floats around him in a heaven of glory.

To dwell upon a world, grossly held down like stones, by its gravitation, or to dwell around a world, sustained like clouds in its atmosphere, may, as much as the supposition seems to outrage our terrestrial common-sense, be only two diametrically opposite solutions of the problem of life—and who shall say that there are not many other solutions of the same problem in the wide and varied universe?

But then comes the question, What is the use of a world having continents and oceans if it is not to have inhabitants suited to dwell upon the one and to conquer the might of the other?

On the other hand, again, it might be assumed that owing to the relative small density of Jupiter he will never have any land, but will condense into a liquid world, a vast crystal globe of some fluid substance which might or might not resemble water, in its constitution.

There would probably, even in that case, be a solid nucleus concealed deep in the centre, but it is open to the imagination to represent the upper portions of the liquid sphere, illuminated by the pale gleams of the four nearest and largest moons, as well as by the distant sun, filled with swimming creatures of an ichthyoid form, and then Jupiter would be a world of intelligent fishes.

"And on that last day up from dead earth will rise the fleet of weird, light driven airships, laden with what is left of humanity huge ray and heat abeyes of the ships will be ard the parent sun, on reast mankind may dether years!"

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

RIBBONS, ribbons, ribbons! From present indications it looks as though Fall and Winter fashions will consist of nothing but ribbons and the more gaudy and startling in color and design they are the more fashionable they will be.

Ribbon trimmings of all sorts, in all manner of shapes, will be noticeable as a feature of the fall fashions at the end of the year. There were at the [illegible] of the designers to-day [illegible] are most [illegible] Stripes two inches wide of the most [illegible] ors [illegible] will [illegible] and flowered patterns [illegible] same striped effect will be made much used.

In millinery the wide [illegible] bons will be utilized in various ways. One method is to gather, later on, an open [illegible] and high side plume and the leaf-shaped points into which it is cut being overstitched with a [illegible] of course, being as protective as it is pretty.

Speaking of millinery, I must not forget to mention a smart motor hat of white panne with turned up brim. I am sending you a sketch of it. It is trimmed with black ostrich tips and a wreath of [illegible] creation and looks as pretty as it is useful.

The Fall hats will be large and will cover the face more if possible than previously. One of the sketches I am sending you is from one of the latest models in [illegible] white bed panne with black satin let into the brim. There is also the white panne hat, and the only trimming is a bow of pink at the side.

For those whose features and figures can stand these enormous hats this model is most becoming.

The [illegible] for [illegible] and stocking effects in ribbons will be manifested in an [illegible] of the modes. One of the photographs I am sending you, for instance, shows a wonderful creation of old mauve. It is veiled in grey chiffon which is brightened by the brilliant oriental coloring seen round the waist.

I am showing you also a [illegible] Indian Summer model for mid-season use. When the heat of the Summer is over and the raw of the Winter cold has not yet come to make heavy clothing necessary or healthful, a gown, of this kind, light in color and fabric, is just the thing.

The use of wings, white wings in particular, will again be popular. They will be widespread and clustered in a variety of different and decorative ways on an endless number of the new Autumn and Winter hats, one most favored scheme being to place them [illegible] an outstanding cluster [illegible] the crown, while [illegible] the back as well [illegible] a great height, and cross one over the other, in the entirely new way, which is also to be [illegible]

My Secrets of Beauty.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

No. 142 - What to Eat.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

A SUBJECT about which every one wants to know more is that of diet. Mme. Cavalieri intelligently discusses to-day the subject "What to Eat," and gives her readers the spartan counsel:

"Out of the chaos of conflicting advice and the discouragement of no advice, we should select a dietary of our own, adapted to our particular needs, and governed not at all by what we like and potatoes, especially sweet potatoes.

Eat prunes and bananas.

Drink with your meals as well as between them.

If on the other hand you are over

If you drink milk be sure it is skimmed.

If you eat any cereal let it be the only food you do eat at that meal. A good rule for all persons is to never eat more than three or four articles at a meal.

Drink tea or coffee, but no chocolate.

Eat no gravies. Cut all the fat off the meat. Better eat rare roast beef. Which reminds me that many of the warning doctors are trying to explode the rule that rare roast beef causes or aggravates rheumatism and gouty disorders.

There must be no sauces, no sweets, nor pastries. Avoid ice cream. Don't fancy because it is cold that all the fat making properties of the cream are gone. The ice has carefully preserved them.

Eat acid fruits, as oranges. In Russia when women wish to reduce their flesh they appease their hunger as well as possible with oranges, the little kind called mandarins. I have seen St. Petersburg women eat fifteen of these at a sitting.

Usually the stout person has a torpid liver. Apples, figs, dates and berries are helpful for this condition.

So is free water drinking.

articles that should never be taken into the human stomach, nor indeed, into any other.

[illegible] puddings should be tolerated to be forgotten. Some day a [illegible] will [illegible] to [illegible] and ignorant as to stuff them [illegible] with an atrocious article they call pie, and with puddings which were almost as menacing to health and life.

Having [illegible] enough [illegible] and, adopt a habit of diet best suited to you. You are lean, we will say, and you desire to gain a few pounds and curves, and thereby undoubtedly add to your attractiveness, especially to the male eye.

Milk, meat and nuts are nourishing.

"Drop a pinch of bicarbonate of soda into a glass of milk to prevent an acid reaction."

In every glassful you drink until you accustom yourself to drinking it. Don't say you cannot drink milk. Anyone can drink it if he drinks prudently, sipping a glass of milk as deliberately as he would eat that quantity of food. Never take less than five minutes for sipping a glass of milk.

Spices, pepper, mustard, even much salt, are irritants of the delicate lining of the stomach.

The less bread you eat the better, and that which you eat should be toasted.

Butter should be eaten sparingly, and that should be sweet.

Soups warm the stomach and distend it, but there is little nourishment in them. Like liquors, their effect is brief.

Pickles and doughnuts are two

Drink one or two quarts of milk a day. Let it be milk with cream in it. If the cream has been skimmed from it it will be nourishing, but not fattening. If it does not agree with you—by which I mean if it causes an acid reaction in the stomach or mouth, place a pinch of bicarbonate of soda

The Care of House Plants—No. 2

By M. B. Gleason.

ONE of the chief causes of poor plants is the [illegible]. House pots are porous and for a reason. [illegible] are glazed, and if plants are [illegible] there is no way for [illegible]

[illegible]

Do not place too near the window. Water [illegible] the leaves to [illegible] the sun on [illegible] they [illegible] by the [illegible]

Do not put oil on the leaves of rubber plants or palms. It will soon fill up the pores of the leaves and injure the plant. If a particularly glossy appearance is desired, put a little milk in water and sponge the leaves carefully.

If palms have a tendency to grow out of the soil do not repot them and try to keep the surface roots covered. It is the nature of some plants to grow that way, and no harm will come. By repotting too deep decay may be caused.

Put plants out in the Summer rain as much as possible, but be sure it is a warm rain. Do not subject a plant to a sudden change of temperature by taking it from a very warm room and putting it into a cold rain.

An eastern exposure is the best for plants. I have never found any [illegible] that do very well in a north window except, perhaps, the agave and the Aspidistra, and possibly the primrose. Even my ferns and palms do much better on an eastern light. Plants vary in regard to the amount [illegible] they require. Horticulturists [illegible] to keep palms and ferns entirely out of the sun, but I have found that the early morning sun, say up to 10 o'clock, is beneficial rather than detrimental. Certain other palms nor ferns should be put in the strong Summer sun for [illegible] a window where the West sun will shine upon the dish and burn them.

If plants are desired for adornment in shady corners it is well to have two plants so that they may be half of the time in a strong light. A plant will keep in a dark place for a fortnight, but not much more than two days at a time.

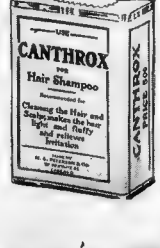
Geraniums and rubber plants require considerable sun.

If plants are of good color and their foliage and put forth their fair amount of new growth you may know that the care they are being receiving is all they require. Such plants need no especial attention besides the weekly sprinkling and the daily watering, etc., and it is time to repot them in the Spring.

But if the leaves are a pale color with the ends dry and brown, or brown spots appear here and there on the leaves, or the leaves drop off, you may know something is wrong. The plant has had either too little or too much water or has been placed in too strong a light or is root bound, there is sour soil, the soil that are fungus on the tender roots; or other parasites are destroying the vitality of the plant.

CANTHROX
THE PERFECT SHAMPOO

Permanently Removes Dandruff



Will not lather on the hands or face—only when applied to the hair. Entirely different from other shampoos. Canthrox is not a soap with a new name. It is a scientific preparation made only for cleansing the hair and scalp.

DRIES QUICKLY WITHOUT STREAKING

The rich, penetrating lather of Canthrox is gentle and positive in its action, and leaves the scalp fresh and sweet and free from dust, dandruff or excess oil. A rich lustre and soft fluffiness to the hair always follows a shampoo with Canthrox—the ideal cleanser of hair and scalp.

WYOMING'S CRIME AGAINST THE ELK

How the Nation's Greatest Big Game Animal Is Becoming Extinct Through a State's Neglect

Cheyenne, Wyo.

VENETY millions of people in the United States would shudder at the sickening story of suffering and cruelty that is being enacted within a few miles of Cheyenne, Wyo., if they could see it with their own eyes. Not only are the helpless animals tortured by hunger and cold, but they are being slaughtered by the hundreds for their hides and horns. The terrible part of it is that it is all unnecessary, and could be stopped at once by the authorities in the State of Wyoming.

In the Spring of 1919, when the snow was melting, it was found that 5,000 elk had died in Jackson's Hole. Many were counted on an area of approximately thirty-six square miles. One hundred and four dead elk in one day were counted on a single square mile. One hundred and four dead elk in one day! Think of it! Two hundred and fifty-six dead elk in two days! Two thousand, eight hundred and sixty-seven dead elk in twenty-eight days! Two thousand, eight hundred and sixty-seven dead elk in twenty-eight days, with Winter coming on!

In 1872 Congress set aside the Yellowstone National Park, embracing an area of approximately thirty-six hundred square miles, and very strin-

But instead of endeavoring to propagate elk in other regions capable of supporting considerable herds, Wyoming concentrated upon the already too large and starving herds which gathered each year in the Jackson's Hole country, seeking its efforts to increase still further the numbers, but making no provision to feed or care for these animals in Winter when their range was stripped of forage, early in the season and kept so for several years, thus [illegible]

The State's method of protecting its own interests was to create a new game refuge south of and adjoining Yellowstone Park, extending south from the south boundary of the park to the mouth of the Buffalo Fork of the Snake River, a distance of [illegible] miles due to the bend of the Yellowstone River, embracing approximately nine hundred square miles of territory. In this refuge, as in Yellowstone Park, many elk

Don't Let Corns Torment You

Corns are utterly needless. You can end the pain instantly. You can loosen the corn without even feeling it. In two days the corn comes out.

This is all done with a little plaster, which contains a dot of B & B Wax. It is applied in a jiffy—no pain, no soreness, no discomfort. You simply forget the corn. In two days take the plaster off, and the corn comes out. That is all there is to it.

This Blue-jay plaster thus removed five million corns per year. Let it remove yours too. Go get a package. Don't wait and suffer. End them as others do.

SUNDAY AMERICAN EXAMINER PATTERNS

BARGAIN DAY—YOUR CHOICE OF ANY TWO PATTERNS FOR 10¢

When Sending for Patterns, Please Be Sure to Fill In the Coupon with Your Name and Address; Also the Size of Pattern Desired.

NO. 9055.—A PRACTICAL WORK APRON

ALL women who have little duties to perform about the house know the advantage of a large apron. Here is one that is intended for use during the morning hours. It covers the entire front of the waist. The skirt flares prettily. Generous sized pockets add greatly to its usefulness. Linen, percale, gingham and holland are all used in the making.

Sizes 24, 28 and 32 inches waist measure. It requires 5¼ yards of 36-inch material for the 28 inch size.

NO. 9001.—LADY'S WAIST, WITH SIDE CLOSING.

A CHARMING little afternoon waist was evolved from this model, worn over a gulmpe of Irish lace. Blue voile, with satin for trimming, was the material employed. The revers lend a jaunty air to the design, and the plaits give width to the shoulders.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 2⅝ yards of 44-inch material for the 36-inch size.

NO. 9050.—AN ATTRACTIVE GIRL'S DRESS.

BLUE poplin, with trimming of checked silk in blue and white, was used for this model. A wide tuck near the armseyes gives breadth to the figure, and the pattern provides for long and short sleeves. Wash fabrics, cloth, silk or velvet may be used for this model.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3½ yards of 27-inch material for the 6-year size.

NO. 9021.—GIRL'S EMPIRE DRESS.

The skirt is gathered to a deep yoke, which is cool and pretty, with its low neck and short sleeves.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—2, 4 and 6 years. It requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch material for the 4-year size.

To obtain any two of these desirable patterns, carefully fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to

NO. 8944.—COSTUME FOR MISSES AND LADIES.

The pattern for misses is cut in sizes 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18 years, and requires 5 yards of 44-inch material for the 16-year size. The pattern for ladies is cut in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure, and requires 6¾ yards of 44-inch material for the 38 inch size.

NO. 9059.—GIRL'S ONE-PIECE SEAMLESS APRON.

GINGHAM, lawn, cambric or similar fabrics may be used for this model, which is simple in construction, comfortable and convenient. The apron is slipped over the head when worn, and the free edges under the arms are held together by straps.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 1¾ yards of 24-inch material for the 6-year size.

NO. 8920.—TWO PRETTY CORSET COVERS.

THESE attractive corset covers may be made of handkerchief linen, embroidered flouncing or other material. Their making is a very simple matter, as will be seen at a glance. The fulness at the neck and waist is regulated by ribbon-run beading. If preferred, worked buttonholes may take the place of the beading for running the ribbon through.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large. For the making of either corset cover 1 yard of 36-inch material will be required.

NO. 9049.—GIRL'S ONE-PIECE DRESS.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 2¾ yards of 44-inch material for the 6-year size.
